Group hopes highway study will be considered

By DAVID LELAND

HATTON CANYON Coalition representatives appeared optimistic this week that Caltrans would carefully examine a $42,000 engineering study they proposed on alternatives to a $34 million freeway.

Thus far, Caltrans officials have maintained that the only logical approach to the area's traffic congestion on Highway 1 is a four-lane freeway through Hatton Canyon, with interchanges at Carpenter Street and Carmel Valley Road.

'Eventually they (Caltrans) will listen. The local politicians want to see alternatives.'

— Skip Lloyd

"Eventually they (Caltrans) will listen," said Skip Lloyd, coalition chairman. "The local politicians want to see alternatives."

Lloyd, who termed the current design a "mega-structure," added that two weeks ago the Monterey County Transportation Commission bore his logic out when members voted to keep funding for the freeway in the county, while not fully endorsing Caltrans' plans.

While public sentiment has recently shown support for widening the existing Highway 1 to four lanes, Caltrans officials say that would only meet the traffic needs for the next 18 years.

For its part, the coalition has steered clear of openly endorsing any design, and has simply stated that there is a need for some solution to relieve traffic congestion on Highway 1.

During a press conference held Wednesday in a portion of Hatton Canyon near Carpenter Street that would be cleared of trees and about 70 feet deep if Caltrans' plan comes to fruition, coalition officials announced the first step in endorsing a design plan.

Wilbur Smith Associates has signed a $40,000 agreement with the coalition to analyze existing traffic patterns and projected traffic needs, as well as alternatives to Caltrans' plan.

After a plan is chosen, the architectural and planning firm of Skidmore, Owings and Merrill will refine the study.

Its work will be donated as a community service, except for $12,000 in anticipated technical expenses.

Many residents remember Nathaniel Owings, a Big Sur resident, for his architectural stylings. His wife Margaret still lives in Big Sur where she is involved in environmental issues.

Skidmore, Owings and Merrill played a similar role in redesigning of Highway 1 at Carmel Hill during the 1960s.

At that time, Caltrans submitted plans which the community rejected. An alternative plan was created and adopted.

"Now Caltrans says 'look at that beautiful freeway we built' " said Lloyd, referring to recent arguments made by Caltrans that it has the community's best interests at heart. "But they were forced to build it."

Lloyd added that it will take about six months to complete work on the study.

THE COALITION is also stepping up its fund-raising efforts, and has named Ed Jordan as co-chairman to spearhead that effort.

As former chairman and CEO of Consolidated Rail Corp., Jordan, a five-year Carmel resident worked closely with Tom Larson, then secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation.

Larson now heads the Federal Highway Administration in Washington, where he is a key decision-maker in federal funding for the highway project.

The federal government will fund about 80 percent of the project.

Other members of the coalition's executive committee include Fran Farina, Scott Hennessy, Lloyd, Roger Newell, Enid Sales and Joyce Stevens.

Lloyd estimated that it will take about $100,000 this year alone to complete the studies and maintain constant legal surveillance on the forthcoming environmental impact statement.

During the past year the group has raised between $20,000 and $30,000, most of which has been spent.

In the coming months the coalition plans to target fund-raisers for the business community, wealthy patrons of freeway alternatives and people of modest incomes who can only comfortably contribute $10.

"This is all about not being driven into a single conclusion under the assumption that it is correct," Jordan said.

A fish story?

YES, THAT'S a real salmon being held by Carmel Valleyite David Saunders, ostensibly caught by his partner in crime, Dr. Joseph Noto, on the Carmel River near the Shulte Road Bride in Carmel Valley. Noto, a retired dentist and one-time water board candidate, said he concocted this fish story in order to bring light on the need for a solution to the area's water problems, specifically the lack of water in the Carmel River and its effects on the annual steelhead trout run. Recent efforts by the Carmel River Steelhead Association to bridge the gap between the ocean and the dry mouth of the river with a "fish ladder" proved fruitless (or rather, more accurately, troutless). Noto said he pulled the stunt, and enlisted Saunders' aid, in order to support efforts to build the Los Padres Dam farther upstream. Noto says he'd like to be able to fish the Carmel River once again in his lifetime. For the real source of Noto and Suanders' catch, turn to page 13. (Chuck Scardina photo.)

Conference on environment issues urges 'think future...act now'

By DAVID LELAND

TO PARAPHRASE an old saying, an ounce of education is worth a pound of awareness, thus the local celebration of Earth Day 1990.

Co-sponsored by the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments (AMBAG), festivities are scheduled for 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, April 21, at the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall. Worldwide Earth Day 1990 will be acknowledged April 22.

"We want to reach people in our community who have concern for our environment, but have not found the way to express that concern," said the Rev. Jay Bartow, one of the event's organizers. "What affects one of us, affects all of us."

The conference is officially known as "Vision 2000 — Think Future — Act Now! A Community's Concern for Its Environment."

After a brief opening ceremony, the conference's keynote address will be given by Rep. Leon Panetta.

In addition to speechs by noted environmentalists and politicians and music by a 50-member children's choir, the conference will feature representatives from the scientific, small business, financial and major corporate communities.

Bartow, pastor at the First Presbyterian Church in Monterey, was one of several local leaders last week touting Earth Day, which this year celebrates its 20th anniversary.

"We have to realize that our resources are finite and we have to preserve them," said Morris Fisher, Pacific Grove mayor.

Fisher urged immediacy in planning for the future and quoted from an old poem, "Our children are the living messengers that we send to a time we cannot see."

Worldwide, April 22 will mark a time when 100 million citizens from 100 countries take part in parades, proclamations, protests, teach-ins and ecofairs.

The celebration has grown considerably since 1970, when Sen. Gaylord Nelson, now counselor of The Wilderness Society and honorary chairman of Earth Day 1990, helped mobilize 20 million Americans under the banner of Mother Nature.

Since the spontaneous outing in 1970, Earth Day has become a strategic operation, with a 115-member American board of directors that includes prominent environmentalists, business executives, religious leaders, celebrities and labor officials.

Granny units, Murphy house on council agenda

THE CARMEL City Council faces a light agenda next week, with a second reading on the ordinance for subordinate units and the first Murphy house up for grabs.

The council will meet at 4 p.m. Tuesday, April 3 in Carmel City Council Chambers.

On the agenda is the final review of the ordinance to legalize subordinate units in Carmel and prohibit new ones except in hardship cases.

The ordinance requires the legal existing units to comply with basic health, safety and building standards.

Once approved, the city will begin a six-month amnesty period for property owners to register existing units. That amnesty period could begin May 1, but no date has been set.

Also on the agenda is consideration of demolition of the first house built by M.J. Murphy. Friends of the First Murphy are attempting to raise money to move it from its current location on Mission Street. The new owners of the property wish to demolish the house, which is currently uninhabitable, and build retail space there.

Preserving character

Dear Editor:

I am writing as a "longtimer" to say I strongly endorse the election of Barbara Brooks to Carmel City Council.

My father, "Ted" Kuster, came here from Los Angeles in the early '20s and built the internationally praised Theatre of the Golden Bough, opposite the Pine Inn on Ocean Avenue. He also designed and built a group of European-style shops flanking the theater, which still stand from the corner of Monte Verde up to Sade's. My brothers, Colin and Shim, and I attended Sunset from kindergarten through grade school. Colin and Steve Brooks, Barbara's husband, were classmates at Carmel High in the '40s. And in the '60s my own children were born here.

So I have watched Carmel grow for over a half century. Change is inevitable and healthy but in no other time here have I been as alarmed as in these past few years watching what appears to be a rapidly accelerating trend toward degeneration of both the residential and business values upon which our unique Carmel was founded.

Barbara Brooks understands our rich heritage. The foundation of her philosophy is the preservation of the character of the Carmel we all treasure. She is extraordinarily well-qualified to hold a council seat and Carmel would be lucky to have her. My father would undoubtedly be voting for her and I urge oldtimers and newcomers alike to support Barbara Brooks on April 10th.

Examining reasons

(An Open letter In Response to Mr. Lindsay Hanna's March 15th Letter to the Editor.)

Dear Editor:

Let's examine Mrs. Laiolo's reasons for voting aginst some of the items favored by other council members:

1. The Beach Walkway: As a result of her insistence, a review of the engineering studies made following the 1982 storms revealed the need for another retaining wall to provide adequate support for construction on Scenic Avenue. The cost: $87,000.

In accepting a $200,000 grant from the Coastal Conservancy based in Berkeley, to aid in the construction of the walkway, the city gave up its authority to begin that project until the project in its entirety had been approved by the conservancy. This is an erosion of local control and Carmel-by-the-Sea could and should have paid for the entire project, and retained its authority and control over that portion of the city. A valid reason to vote in opposition.

2. Moratoriums on the placement of water meters: Two and a half years ago the city sued the water management district for imposing a moratorium on the placement of water meters in Carmel-by-the-Sea. At that time the courts clarified that this action intruded into the land use aspect of city government. It is wrong to ask an outside agency to regulate the use of land within a jurisdiction and that was the purpose of the council's action on July 11, 1989, in requesting the water board to consider a moratorium. Another instance of eroding local control requiring a vote in opposition.

3. Residential Design Standards: The motion, "That the apparent bulk and size of houses in Carmel-by-the-Sea is too massive," is a general statement which fails to address the current concern of design review and neighborhood compatibility. The motion was preceded by this motion, "It was moved by Wright and seconded by White, that with regard to the development standards in the R-1 district, the council is concerned that houses are currently allowed to be constructed that are too large for the character of the community." The motion failed with Mayor Grace and Councilmembers Fischer and Laiolo voting no. A lack of consistency is evident, both motions so similar.

The design review process now in effect will provide great help in addressing the question of bulk and mass.

Eight other motions on this topic passed unanimously at this meeting.

4. The Urban Forest: If tree roots are destroying an existing home, and/or its service facilities that owner should have the right to protect his home.

5. Open space: The purchases of the Handley and Hodges properties removed two residentially serving businesses. The council never toured either site before approving the purchases. Nine of the 14 speakers at the one public hearing on the purchase of the Hodges property spoke against the purchase. A new title search report was produced after the council voted to make the Hodges purchases at a figure $200,000 above the highest and full build-out appraised value. Land use regulations on the land and easements would almost preclude construction of an extent. The annual debt payments of over $300,000 for the two pieces of property preclude using those funds on repairing our washboard streets and inadequate storm drainage system. This money would better serve, if applied to the needs of those who live and work in this city.

Is it called vision when public funds are used in this manner? Our village by the sea needs care today, needs protection from being ruled by outsiders, needs honesty and open government with positive community relations. As mayor, Elinor Laiolo will provide the vision for these needs. She is a strong person with deep convictions concerning our small community. She will not buckle under to the pressure of outside interests.

Committee to Elect
Elinor Laiolo for Mayor

Laiolo supporter

Dear Editor:

It becomes very clear during times of difficulty and unrest such as Carmel has endured these last few years, that the type of leadership needed is a person who will not use the office of mayor for personal glory or gain but instead, a person who is dedicated to work for the welfare of the community and the people therein.

A person who is patient and listens and one who makes decisions after careful research and study. One who performs in accordance with facts and experience and one who leads with conscientious conviction and dedication.

I am speaking, of course, of Elinor Laiolo who has been mayor-pro-tempore and over the past four years has proven her worth, her professionalism, strength and grace.

The voters of Carmel-by-the-Sea owe it to themselves to vote for the one person best suited and most worthy of the position of mayor. Elinor Laiolo can be trusted to improve and protect the interests, defend the rights and truly represent the people of the town.

There is one thing you can depend on — you can depend on Elinor!!

I summarize my endorsement by saying:

Vote for Elinor
You need look no farther
Ponder no more
Do what should have been done
Two years before

Her door will be open
She'll be as near as your phone
She'll act with clear conscience
And speak in clear tones

A vote for Laiolo
For Elinor as Mayor,
Does credit to Carmel
And helps everyone there

Truly dedicated
Strong, honest and true
Elinor Laiolo will be the Best mayor for you.

GUEST EDITORIAL

By Howard Nieman, Jr.

The Final Days

THE FINAL days of the Carmel Residents Association have, it appears, arrived RIP.

The CRA leadership and small cadre of core supporters of the Carmel Residents Association who have expressed their views on my editorials about CRA have made two important points: First, CRA supporters don't care about facts; instead they rely on angry, emotional rhetoric to justify the existence of their organization. Second, they have nothing positive, or constructive, to say about CRA itself or this community; again, they seem only capable of bitter, personal attacks against those expressing opposing views. CRA's leadership is leading their organization to its just fate: the end.

I say that because any organization which can't answer criticism except by engaging in personal attacks (and asking its members to do the same), on those who don't agree with them just doesn't serve the public interest nor deserve public support or confidence. And while CRA has many members who care deeply about Carmel, CRA's leadership is another story.

Some final comments:

No. 1: The honest, intelligent response to criticism is a well argued, factual reply. Sadly, CRA's response to discussion of itself is not grounded in facts but in personalities. Personal attacks are a sign of inner weakness and a lack of character and self-confidence. I believe it significant that CRA has not released its platform, talked about its vision of Carmel nor released its positions on the issues. My conclusion is that all of the concerns I expressed about CRA are 100 percent on target. CRA has elected not to tout its strengths; I assume to my editorial concerns, it has admitted it is a "residents association" in name only. So much for that issue.

No. 2: This election is nevertheless partially a referendum on CRA. If you want CRA to control city hall, support CRA team candidates. On the other hand, if you want qualified, experienced and independent leadership, vote for non-CRA aligned candidates. The choice is clear: the battle lines have been drawn and the contest scheduled. This is one match that can't be postponed nor should it be avoided.

No. 3: I regret concluding that some CRA supporters don't care as much about Carmel as they do in defending their membership in CRA. Truthfully, they have more at stake in defending their candidates than telling us why they deserve public trust and confidence. If CRA and their candidates are worthy of support, why haven't they told us why? Respond with facts. Respond with information. But response after response are but hollow, defensive statements. CRA admits it is simply a political action committee without a publicly defined agenda or platform. Absent is reason, absent is any understanding of the issues, absent is an honest attempt at fact-finding and above all, absent is basic civility. Absent from CRA is that delicate balance upon which this community survives and upon which we can prosper in the 1990s.

No. 4: Many CRA supporters are still fighting Clint Eastwood rather than making a positive contribution to their community. They have never recovered from being defeated four years ago and cling to a false belief that Carmel was ruined four years ago.

No. 5: CRA leadefship talks of representing us, but do they represent you? Have they asked for your ideas? Have they listened to opposing views? Have they respected the views of their neighbors? The answer is no. I ask you, just what does CRA stand for?

No. 6: We must act carefully but boldly in the future. We need intelligence, experience and courage to alter Carmel's course. Words are not enough. We need action. Saying you are for Carmel is not enough. We need people who can perform. I resent the arrogance of CRA leadership and supporters who claim that those of us who no longer support the CRA position don't want the best for Carmel. So far, CRA itself has done nothing for Carmel. They have done nothing to make this a better place to live. They have done nothing to preserve historic structures. The list goes on and on. Yes, they talk a good tale, but it stops right there.

No. 7: I hope the city council elected on April 10 will prepare a list of basic policy questions for submission to the voters on such issues as design review, buying more open space and budget priorities. Conducting a professional survey or poll will end years of indecision and allow us to work together to make our hometown better. It will also eliminate the need for the divisiveness encouraged by CRA and instead focus our energies on solving our problems. That would be a welcome change indeed!

As you choose the candidates of your choice, consider the needs of the community. Look ahead. Exercise your informed judgment. Be bold. But above all, vote on April 10th.

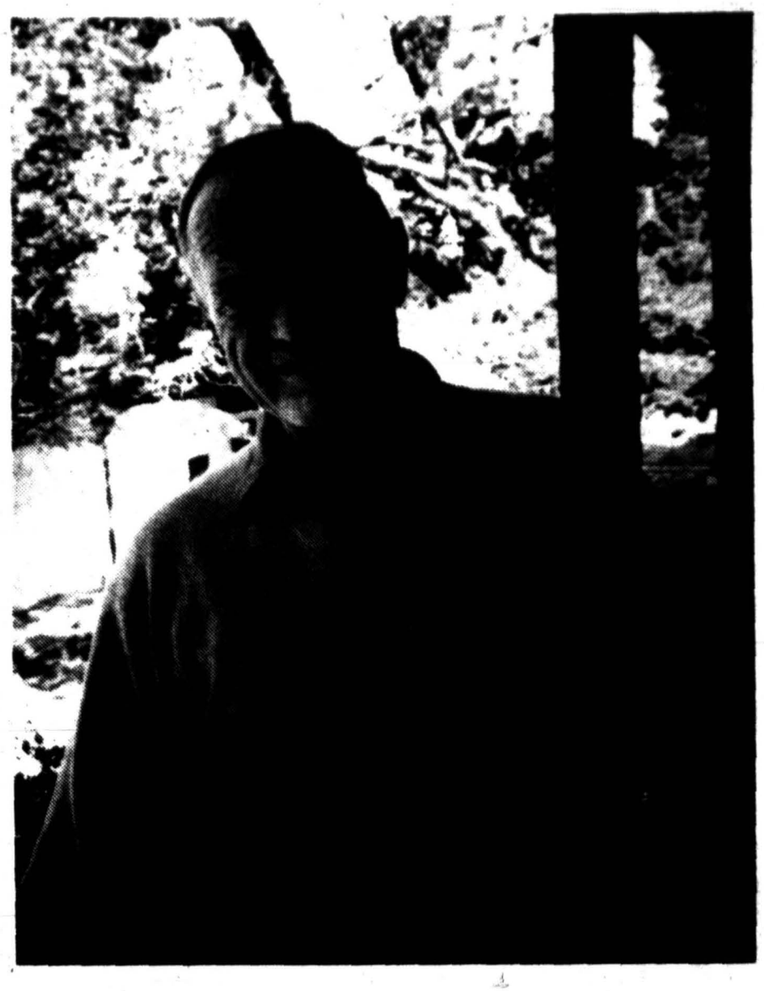
BARBARA BROOKS is one of three candidates running for two seats on the Carmel City Council.

CARLA RAMSEY, Carmel Planning Commission chairperson is a candidate for a seat on the Carmel City Council.



ROBERT "BOB" Fischer, incumbent council candidate elected in 1986, will seek a second four-year term.

Council candidates reveal their views as election nears

Barbara Brooks

BARBARA BROOKS has a singular distinction as a candidate in the upcoming Carmel election: she's the only one who does not have an official connection with the existing city government.

In a city election where the candidates are the current mayor, two city councilmembers and the planning commission chairperson, Brooks is the only one that has no city government title.

But she has been involved in the city's decision-making process and discussions of the issues, particularly as former president of Carmel Residents Association.

In a previous interview with The Carmel Pine Cone, Brooks stated that she found as a member of the audience "you still don't have a vote" and that is what counts in the end.

A retired teacher, Brooks said she learned leadership skills as a board member of the American Association of University Women, skills that are important in the political process.

"People with high ideals often don't have the skills," Brooks said, and that hurts their progress of many issues.

The most important of those skills is to respect everyone in the process and remember that everyone is important. If there is disagreement, find a common ground to begin working toward a solution.

"That is one of the reasons why I started going the CBA tings. We were supposed to have nothing in common, but

'The reality is, the only thing we can do anything about it (development) as a city is have some control over what comes down and what goes back up. The rest is really none of our business.'

— Barbara Brooks

I found we have all kinds of things in common," she said.

Understanding the procedure, "what can and can't be done", is also important, Brooks said.

"You have to understand procedure and how things can be accomplished. As I have said before, a lot of people just play 'ain't it awful' about things we can't do anything about. We have to be realistic and reasonable and try to accomplish the things we can. For example, a lot of people are saying 'ain't it awful' about developers coming to town and buying our lots and our little cottages are coming down. All right, those are the realities," she said "You may like or dislike them, but that is immaterial. The reality is, the only thing we can do anything about it as a city is have some control over what comes down and what goes back up. The rest is really none of our business."

For the future, Carmel is facing "unprecedented pressures."

"Our little cottages, now worth $500,000 are being pushed down. We have to look at that. We can't just throw up our hands and abandon ship because we have this problem," she said.

In the past, Brooks has favored a reduction in housing size, but is now interested in a compromise suggested at a planning commission meeting, permit the same maximum size homes and require 45 percent open space.

"The reason for my wanting (to reduce the size of houses on a 4,000 square foot lot to) 1,600 square feet maximum was to get more open space," she explained. The 45 percent open space requirement — open from ground to sky — provides the

Carla Ramsey

EVEN AFTER four years of dealing with the microphones at city hall while on the planning commission, Carla Ramsey is looking for four more years, but this time on the city council.

The current planning commission chairperson, Ramsey said her years on the commission has given her the "necessary tools" for working in city government, including knowledge of the process. The committees and seminars she has attended has taught her about the laws.

Stories by Nancy Hills

A Realtor, Ramsey said her profession has also been a benefit, contrary to the way most people think about it politically.

"I'm out looking at property several days a week — looking at good examples and bad examples of homes. I know the kind of people buying homes and moving to Carmel and why they are moving here," she said.

Additionally, Ramsey said she has lived on the peninsula for 26 years and in Carmel for 15, during which time time she raised her family and earned a living.

As with all the candidates, Ramsey sees R-1 design as the "prominent problem" in Carmel.

"I think the main problem is we — and not just the planning commission, the city — has not been strong enough on design review. That has been exacerbated by the rush of out-of-town speculation builders who seem to often be erecting buildings that have no relation to their sites," she said.

Recently, Ramsey said, the planning commission turned down a house because it was "out of scale in relation to mass, bulk and height" of the rest of the neighborhood.

The city has been "basically operating operating under the same rules we have been operating under for a number of years as far as dimensions," Ramsey said, and it is stricter design review that is needed.

"It has taken a longer time for the realization, through education, to come about so planning commissioners, and hopefully council members, know they really do have the power and discretion as far as design review. I think that must be spelled out in some way," she added. "We need to work on strengthening those design review guidelines, and that can be done a number of ways."

Design review can be subject to political whims as long "we don't have strong guidelines," she said. "If we can lay down guidelines, perhaps a booklet, with materials, type of houses, and also require models — some form of three-dimensional examples of what is going to be built."

To the complaints about some of the commission's past decisions, or houses that have been built in the last four years, Ramsey said there were many factors that contributed to both the good and bad.

"I'm not going to take full responsibility for all planning commissioners and council members. I dislike that conglomeration of houses that happened (on the Kinnoull estate) probably as much as anyone. Several things happened. We did not have a strong design review at that time, we had different commissioners on the commission than we have at this time. We had a different council. Now whether it is applicable to this particular subject or not, the planning commission was appealed time and time again and those

Bob Fischer

SOME PEOPLE in Carmel may have good reasons not to tell others how they first met Robert "Bob" Fischer.

Fischer is a former Carmel police officer with 31 years on the force, reaching the post of assistant chief of police before his retirement in January 1985.

"My background in Carmel extends over 40 years. I married a Carmel girl, that went to school and high school in Carmel. We raised three children that went through all the Carmel school system. I became a police officer in 1953, stayed 31 years and retired assistant chief of police," he said.

But Fischer has not been inactive during his retirement. After four years on the Carmel City Council, he is campaigning for a second four-year term.

Looking toward the future for Carmel and the turn of the century, Fischer said he sees fewer vacation rentals and more full-time residents.

"It will affect the city, hopefully, with an ingestion of young families, young people and young ideas, who would come to the community, as I did, to serve the community as a volunteer or as a worker. And that's good, that's positive," he said. "I prefer to see every house in Carmel occupied nearly full time."

Because of that future, Fischer said, the acquisition of open space now "will be fully appreciated by the year 2000 because

'You can't stop some of the building going into larger homes, but we can control the size and bulk of them. And that is important.'

— Bob Fischer

of the inundation of building that is going to occur, south of us, in the east and in the Pebble Beach area," Fischer said. "That open space area of Carmel...is going to be our buffer between metro-suburban and village."

The biggest issue facing Carmel right now, Fischer said, is building in the R-1 district, though "we have almost complete buildout."

"The bulk and size, lack of open space, lack of good design review, lack of neighborhood input," are some problems he sees from the past. One, better design review, is on the mend with the planning commission's design review committee.

"You can't stop some of the building going into larger homes, but we can control the size and bulk of them. And that is important," he said.

Other issues that confront the council at this time include "the amendment to the general plan, including one looking at the four policies of solar rights, mass, bulk and privacy. The second, of course, is the enhancement of design review, the proper development of the open space acquired."

While there is no piece of land he wants to buy right now, Fischer is pleased that the city invested in the land it did.

"Initially, when Hodges came up — and I was surprised it was available — and the acquisition of the same, basically fulfilled my desire for open space surrounding the city. I'm including Pescadero Canyon, Handley is open, Flanders estate is open, Hodges is open and, of course, the beach is open," he said. "So I think having the city surrounded by open space is a plus."

"It should be for the children of Carmel, the sphere of influence, primarily those groups, and maybe even to the

She wants more teaching, less bureaucracy in schools

By DAVID LELAND

IT SEEMS somewhat ironic that Kathrina Ognyanovich, running for Monterey County Superintendent of Schools, maintains a platform of reducing the size of administration in area schools.

Ognyanovich, who has served on the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District board for 10 years, prides herself as being in the forefront of international education, where there is more teaching and less bureaucracy.

"We (Monterey County) are not ready to compete on an international level and are not ready for the year 2000," said Ognyanovich, the first woman in 40 years to seek the superintendent's position. "(If elected) I'm planning to make radical changes. I'm tired of seeing parents pay for an education that does not produce results."

Ognyanovich cites, as an example, one European school that teaches 2,600 students — the administration consists of a principal and secretary. Classes, which are a maximum of 22 students, are taught by teachers who double as counselors.

"The administration should get back into the classroom," said Ognyanovich, who is running against two opponents in the June 5 general election.

Only then, she said, can funding for educational priorities be reordered to place the emphasis on the classroom.

A peninsula resident since 1974, Ognyanovich, an accomplished violinist, has been active in helping refugees from Vietnam and served as publicity director with Hidden Valley Music Seminars.

Since 1983, she has served as an educational consultant for the European Ministry of Education, which allows her to see, firsthand, the type of instruction occuring in those nations.

Ognyanovich said that European students practice "cooperative learning," a logical approach that produces more effective results.

For example, students working on language studies immediately apply those skills to other areas such as theater and literature.

If elected, Ognyanovich platform seeks to:

- Form partnership programs with San Jose State University and UC Santa Cruz.
- Improve early childhood education programs.
- Increase foreign language studies.
- Make computer education accessible to all students.
- Include academic curricula in vocational education.
- Improve achievements and meet the needs of minority students.
- Continue being accountable for budget expenditures and secure additional funds for the county.

OGNYANOVICH, WHO serves as chairperson for the Monterey County Task Force to Promote Self-Esteem, said she is in constant contact with state legislators and will be able to secure funding for the county.

RUNNING IN the June 5 election for Monterey County Superintendent of Education, Kathrina Ognyanovich is campaigning for less bureaucracy in area schools. (David Leland photo.)

'(If elected) I'm planning to make radical changes. I'm tired of seeing parents pay for an education that does not produce results.'
— Kathrina Ognyanovich

Yugoslavian-born Ognyanovich owns three degrees from major universities in the United States and Europe and speaks five languages.

Having taught school on several levels, she is well aware of how class size can adversely affect education.

"In a small class you teach, in a large class you just talk," she said, adding that students often have a tendancy to misbehave in large classes.

She fears that the United States is lagging further and further behind its European counterparts.

"We have to make changes," she said. "We have to go outside of our county and state boundaries and into global academia."

City libraries get reprieve for 12 months from board of supes

By DAVID LELAND

ONCE AGAIN, four city libraries receiving county funding have been given a 12-month reprieve.

For more than a year the county librarian has threatened to cancel contracts to library facilities in Carmel, Pacifi Grove, Monterey and Salinas — a move that some officials believe could severely limit services to patrons in those areas.

"It's a quality-of-life issue," said 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, who persuaded Dallas Schaffer, county librarian, to postpone any action until further studies can be completed.

The contracts run until December 1991, but Schaffer had requested that the board of supervisors terminate the contracts at the end of the fiscal year (June 30).

Schaffer's position is that funding city libraries with county money limits services to county citizens who do not frequent those libraries.

"The county library (already) has inadequate operating funding," said Schaffer, adding that last year hours were decreased by 8 percent and the purchase of books by 12 percent.

The county library's 16 branches, Bookmobile and books by mail program receive their funding through a special tax district and have an annual budget of $2.8 million. Last year the board of supervisors chipped in an additional $150,000 to help defray expenses.

The contracts, which help libraries purchase books, amount to a total of $443,413. Broken down that means $87,352 (Carmel), $31,926 (Pacific Grove), $144,553 (Monterey), and $179,582 (Salinas).

Locally, Carmel's library services many residents from the county, a fact that Schaffer acknowledges. But that trade-off still does not make the funding efforts equitable for residents in areas such as King City.

It was thought that library funding would be saved with the passage of Measure B, which levied a half-cent sales tax on peninsula residents.

But a lawsuit filed by the Monterey Peninsula Taxpayers Association challenging the legality of the tax has effectively stifled the tax.

"I recommend that they do not count on the Measure B funding," Strasser Kauffman said. "I don't think that's wise."

Strasser Kauffman added that the issue becomes particularly thorny because libraries are not state-mandated, and thus are not guaranteed funding.

'I recommend that they (libraries), do not count on the Measure B funding. I don't think that's wise.'
— Karin Strasser Kauffman

"Legally, cities and counties could shut down their libraries," she said, adding that such a possibilty is far-fetched.

Realistically, the next months will be spent finding out if the four libraries in question are being run as efficiently as possible, Schaffer said.

While no meetings are scheduled, Schaffer said she would like to an outside agency to conduct a cost-benefit analysis, which could cost between $10,000-$30,000, within the next five months.

In the meantime, the Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees is not waiting until the county makes its decision. The board is preparing to begin raising money for an endowment fund from which the Carmel library will buy books, alleviating the yearly problems of the county library budget.

Conference on environment issues

There is also an international board, with representatives from 33 countries.

IN ADDITION, several smaller organizations, such as Seattle-based Earth Day 20, are extremely active in this year's movement.

Earth Day 20 is planning a weeklong exposition leading up to April 22, which will be broadcast live via satellite to screens on college campuses throughout the country.

The celebration of 1970 proved that there is power in numbers. Soon after the event substantial changes began to occur within the federal government.

'We want to reach people in our community who have concern for our environment, but have not found the way to express that concern. What affects one of us, affects all of us.'

— Rev. Jay Bartow

For example:

- The Environmental Protection Agency was established.
- The Clean Water Act was adopted.
- Seven congressmen known for their poor environmental records were voted out of office.
- Development of the Supersonic Transport was halted.
- The Federal Occupational Health and Safety Act aimed at "in-plant" pollution was passed.

Indeed, any politician worth his salt was forced to sit up and take notice of the flow of sentiment.

Wrote the New York Times: "Conservatives were for it. Liberals were for it. Democrats, Republicans and indpendents were for it. So were the ins, the outs, the Executive and Legislative branches of government."

Long-term objectives for the next decade through Earth Day include a worldwide ban on chlorfluorcarbons, reduction of carbon monoxide emmissions, preserving forests, recycling and heightened protection for endangered species and habitats.

Del Rey Oaks mayor and current state Coastal Commission member Robert Franco holds up high hopes for those attempting to spread the word that the environment is a fragile commodity.

"I was not educated (in environment issues), until I came to this beautiful area," he said. "Anyone with any common sense can be educated."

Carmel Mayor Jean Grace said that Earth Day is a time to think on a global, rather than provincial level.

"Traditionally, we've (Carmel) been over the hill and not too involved in other regions," she said. "Our joining with other cities is important."

Grace echoed the words of Nicolas Papadakis, AMBAG executive director, who stressed that a "multi-jurisdictional" type of solution on the peninsula must be achieved as the year 2000 nears.

For example, cities can no longer ignore the fact that traffic affects everyone.

"As a past transportation planner I have been in the year 2000 and I know what is needed," Papadakis said. "In the future of transportation on the peninsula, I don't see anything bright."

Along with transportation, Papadakis said issues such as offshore oil drilling, tanker lanes and the proposed Monterey Bay Sanctuary need to be resolved during the coming decade.

Bartow said he believes caring for the environment is a divine action.

"We are called to protect the earth as a precious gift from God," he said.

The Earth Day conference is free, but donations will be accepted. For further information call 375-5291.

Carmel Historical Survey
YESTERDAY & TODAY
Sponsored by Carmel Heritage

By Sharon Lawrence

The Pleasures of Tradition...

ONE MORNING soon, as dawn breaks over Mission Street, the area between Fifth and Sixth avenues will be cleared of cars as the lengthy boom to a giant crane is assembled. It will be moving day for the "first Murphy," the 88-year-old house nestled just behind the former Emile Norman gallery.

The crane will swoop this forerunner of the "Carmel cottage" — designed and constructed by the late master builder M.J. Murphy — across the treetops to a waiting mover's platform.

In past weeks, historical surveyors and the steering committee to "Save the First Murphy" have found growing and enthusiastic support from the community as they explored the whys and wherefores of saving, renovating and re-situating the historic house. On April 3, members of the city council will discuss and vote on the future of the Murphy. With their approval, it will be rescued from demolition and given a new location. The possibilities range from the city-owned Torres Street (old Hayward Lumber) property to the Forest Theater to the newly acquired Hodges acreage or other city land.

What then? Renovation, certainly, including the restoration of the original hipped roof that gave the home great charm. "We believe the house can be useful in a new way," says Enid Sales, survey director. "We see the Murphy as a clubhouse and meeting place for the residents, complete with a changing exhibition of historic photographs and memorabilia. It's very exciting to hear so much positive reaction to this idea."

"Like the old Sancho Panza..." says Ben Lyon, expressing the sentiments of many longtime Carmelites. "I came here in 1960. I'd been all over the country and the Bay Area, and I'd never seen a gathering place that could compare to Sancho's.

A VIEW of the rear of the first Murphy house, which is currently the focus of preservation efforts by Carmel area residents. The 88-year-old house is located between Fifth and Sixth avenues just behind the former Emile Norman Gallery. (Del Kaller photo.)

It attracted residents of a certain intellectual and creative bent. I spent many happy hours there playing chess or listening to a good guitar. And always, there was spirited conversation. It was a rich mixture of people and ideas. You had a chance to meet some of the best minds on the peninsula there. We lost something really important when it closed."

The ambiance and camaraderie of a village clubhouse or coffeehouse is, of course, nothing new. Such places have flourished for hundreds of years in cities, large and small, across Europe. "It's an opportunity to re-build based on tradition," says Claudine Van Vleet, an active survey and Murphy steering committee member, "and recapture some of the flavor that has made Carmel special."

Meanwhile the growing group of surveyors continues to seek the names of past and present owners of Murphy-built homes. "We are truly grateful for the many people who have called to add their names to the list," says Enid Sales. "They have been giving us information that is invaluable towards our goal of listing a Murphy house on the National Register of Historic Places. We're on the hunt for the most definitive Murphy of the more than 300 he designed and built."

Mrs. Sales may be reached at 625-0566 by those who wish to be helpful. Financial contributions for the moving and renovating of the Murphy cottage can be sent to 3206 Serra Avenue, Carmel 93923. Checks should be made out to Carmel Heritage/Save the First Murphy.

18 issue of the S.F. Chronicle, be sure to read Harold Gilliam's article, "The Last Days of Carmel," which is found in the This World section.

To quote Gilliam: "The land speculators have discovered Eden-by-the-Sea; and when they have finished (if they ever do), they will have converted it into Everytown by the Freeway." And again, "So the old Carmel cottages in the forest seems to be coming to an end — unless the residents mobilize, as they have done in the past, to preserve the community's integrity."

To whom do we have to thank for this depressing forecast? Could it be the planning commission? You would have thought that a commission composed of several architects (Dahlstrom and Keeble), two real estate agents (Carla Ramsey and Steven Poohar), a newspaper owner (Bill Brown), and appraiser (John Kennedy), grocer (Coniglio), engineer (Terry Thomas), would have had the intelligence, the sensitivity, and the foresight to have prevented this from happening.

We must heed Gilliam's admonition. The citizens of Carmel ARE mobilizing (the 600 plus members of the Carmel Resident's Association attest to that), and the April 10 city election will give us our chance to vote for candidates who will best serve our community.

Are we going to elect planning commissioner Carla Ramsey to the city council? I think not. I believe Carmel residents will vote for Barbara Brooks, a woman committed through words and deeds to preserving the residential character of our city.

If you cannot find Gilliam's article, write to me and I will send you a copy.

Supporting Wildlife

Dear Editor:

I would like to comment on Betty Barron's article "Hatton Hang-up" March 8, 1990.

"Who enjoys the wildlife?" Most everyone on both sides of the canyon do. I most certainly do. I love to see the plentiful wildlife everyday. A family of deer, young twins mock-fighting, a couple of bobcats climbing the tree behind our fence. A redtail hawk and his mate gliding above the canyon, looking for breakfast, lunch and dinner, taking a break on top of the tree. I communicate with them and they bring me joy.

The canyon is full of life and food for many species. The snakes in my garden are harmless and beneficial, for they eat bugs, as do the colourful lizards. The raccoons and owls roam at night. Within a year I see 18 varieties of birds in my garden. The Hatton Canyon supports all this wildlife.

Full speed ahead

Dear Editor:

It was most refreshing to read the column by Betty Barron in your issue of March 8 in which she sets forth several down-to-earth reasons to support the proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway. I agree with her most whole heartedly.

Some writers who are in opposition have set forth some rather ridiculous arguments in support of their position. One really far out statement compares a projected gridlock and congestion similar to the freeways in Southern California. Where does this writer think the Southern California traffic problem would be without the freeways?

I have lived near the intersection of Atherton Drive and Highway 1 for 30 years and have seen the problem going from bad to worse with each passing year. I also remember the hue and cry that went up from some over the plan to four-lane highway 1 over the Carmel Hill. The words "Can of Worms" and "Rape of the Land" were prevalent then. I wonder how many of the current opponents to the Hatton Canyon project would prefer to go back to the old two-lane road.

Then I read where coalitions have been formed to fight the Hatton Canyon route. To paraphrase a famous saying by an early American naval hero - "Damn the coalitions, full speed ahead." I seem to remember that we won that war also.

Dear Editor:

needed open space.

A city government does not have the right to refuse building on a lots of record, she said, but she agrees with the city council's position to not create new lots record from the many parcels that contain pieces of lots.

But it is possible for Carmel to be even better in the year 2000 than it is now, Brooks said.

"I think we are beginning to get a handle on what is important about this place. The heritage survey and subsequent ordinance will give us a foundation for development in the town," she said.

Serving on the city's ad hoc architectural preservation committee has taught her a lot about preservation and what is important and not important, she said.

"There are some old buildings we would all be distressed to see gone, like the Pine Inn," she said, "but there are also old buildings which are not significant and the town will not suffer to lose them if we make preservation the foundation of our planning decisions. That means that the new buildings are built to be in character and scale to what is traditional and the best parts of Carmel."

Another problem for Carmel in the future, Brooks said, is the escalating rents in the commercial district that are changing the feel of Carmel.

"It is beginning to lose its identity," Brooks said.

She is opposed to rent control — "it seems to develop problems of its own" — but suggested that some form of incentives could be developed.

As for parking, Brooks said she is more interested in smaller garages or parking facilities scattered throughout the town rather than one large garage.

"I will be interested in what the parking committee comes up with," she said.

Any solution to any of the problems of Carmel, Brooks said, need to be on a "human scale" because that is what makes this city a good place to live.

Brooks said she is someone who practices what she says.

"In this election time it is popular to preach that we should all work together. This has been my practice. In addition to serving as the CRA president, I am the only council candidate that has regularly attended residential and business association meetings and, as you know, I have been faithful in attending and participating in city council and planning commission meetings. Now I think I can serve the city better with a seat on the city council where I can turn the perspective I have of the community into a vote," she concluded, adding that she has no "vested interest" in the outcome of any of the problems in Carmel.

Bob Fischer

workers in the city," he said. "I think it would provide an incentive, particularly to the workers, to be better workers knowing their children are close by and safe.

"I would look into school system maybe cooperating with it, but private enterprise is really not what I had in mind because I'm looking at families that might not be able to afford the private oganization."

Recreation department involvement is also a possibility, he said, "where the child care charges would be geared according to the wages earned, downscaled as they get lowered."

Fischer is interested in some form of subsidized housing for city employees so they can live in and get to know the town.

"I feel it is a problem when city employees, particularly safety employees, are hired elsewhere and we pay for their uniforms, they work eight hours a day and go home to live in Marina, Pacific Grove or Monterey to live. I've seen good people lost because they could not find affordable housing in the Carmel area or even in a nearby town," Fischer said. "If they were given the opportunity to move into subsidized housing or some type of housing in Carmel for a year, they would have garnered within that year a feeling for the community. And also assist them in making the relocation, which is also a terrible expenses," Fischer said.

The two projects Fischer said he is the proudest of during his past four years is the completion of the beach walkway and the senior citizen housing on Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue.

Fischer's interest in young families has generated some unique stances in the campaign, including a child care center, probably to be located at Sunset Center bungalows.

Elected in 1986 along with Clint Eastwood and Elinor Laiolo, Fischer said he is surprised and distressed at the criticism of Eastwood's administration.

"I never cease to be amazed that no full recognition has ever been given to the man for what I consider to be a complete turnabout in Carmel politics — and I've been aware of Carmel politics for years," he said.

That turnabout, he said, was one of "from public apathy to public interest. Witness the evolution of neighborhood groups that have come into being since 1986. Some extremely good, some not so good, but all vocal and all needed."

appeals were upheld by the council," she said.

"I think two of the good things that happened about the Kinnoull subdivision is maintaining the old residence on an acre and a half. Also, the road we put through is not as offensive as it could be. It meanders as much as it could to (avoid trees) and is wide enough for emergency vehicles," she said. "I believe there were some commissioners at that time who did not realize the (legal) power the commission had."

One step the planning commission is taking to change the situation is the revival of the design review committee, which now meets twice a month, Ramsey explained, and added she believes remodels should be included strict design review.

Ramsey is skeptical about reducing the size of houses to control the problems in the R-1 district because reducing the size of the homes eliminates families, she said.

"I think we should have a mixture. There is no reason why a well-designed large home cannot co-exist next door to a well-designed smaller home," she said.

One area the planning commission has taken the lead in, she said, is commercial district design, where the code was strengthened.

It also has been very careful about commercial signs.

"People laugh about it and ask why we spend so much time on signs, but all you have to do is go into a city that is badly signed and see what effect has," she said.

"Lighting should also be a part of design review," she added.

In the future, Ramsey said, we cannot develop unless there are the roads and the water.

"Traffic is not going to get better. I would like to keep us out of the residential neighborhoods as much as possible and hopefully we will be able to have some parking solutions," she said.

Those answer may be a couple of underground garages, she said, but she is waiting to see what the parking committee has to say.

"I'm really concerned about air pollution. The (tour) buses

Pine Cone looking for a few good houses

THE CARMEL Pine Cone invites the residents of Carmel to decide what is "Carmel character."

Residents are invited to select and photograph the five homes they most like within Carmel's one mile square and mail or bring the photographs to the newspaper's office.

Each photograph should include a written explanation of why that particular home is an example of Carmel character and good architecture (and clearly labeled which explanation goes with which picture). The name, address and telephone number of the person or group submitting the photograhs must be included.

The examples will be used in a future article.

The photographs and accompanying explanation should be sent to Photos, Carmel Pine Cone, P.O. Box G-1, Carmel, 93921 or brought to the Pine Cone office between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. at the northeast corner San Carlos Street and Ocean Avenue, upstairs.

Black and white photographs are preferred. Inexpensive black and white prints can be done with Ilford XP1 film which can be printed using the color processing at normal color print rates. No slides or photocopies of photos, please.

Who's who in resident groups?

CARMEL RESIDENTS Association or Carmel-by-the-Sea Residents Association Committee?

The CRA is talking to attorneys about a newly formed political action committee called Carmel-by-the-Sea Residents Association Committee which is listed as being for the election of Elinor Laiolo for mayor. Judith Thodos is listed as treasurer.

The CRA is endorsing Jean Grace for mayor.

"We think it is a sleazy attempt to confuse the voters," CRA president Clayton Anderson said.

The Carmel Pine Cone was unable to contact members of the new group before presstime.

Medi-Cal changes

I AM glad that many of us will not need to be in a situation to be concerned about transferring assets if we need Medi-Cal assistance.

In my previous column awhile back, I referred to a way to retain assets through a transfer technique. The repeal of the Medicare Catastrophic ACT (MCCA) did not affect it, but the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1989 (OBRA '89) did.

According to the "Elderlaw Report" of January 1990, the major innovation of OBRA '89 is that for the first time it applies the transfer of assets penalties to transfers made by the spouse of a Medi-Cal applicant as well as to those made by the applicant himself or herself. This means that an applicant for Medi-Cal may not be eligible for up to 30 months if his/her spouse has transferred assets.

In addition, under OBRA '89 the spousal re-transfer penalties, under which MCCA did not seem to apply when the original transfer was made by a spouse in a nursing home, now apply to all situations. They will apply to transfers made after December 19, 1989, the date which President Bush signed the bill into law. It is advisable that you receive expert advice on this transfer before you make a decision for tax purposes.

RETIREMENT BLUES

Most everyone looks forward to retirement. In their plans they see or visualize the vacations, the leisure time, no schedules and a chance to do all the things they could not do when they were working. Unfortunately for many, they find that the glamor wears off and the itch to return to work gradually infects them.

Perhaps the best substitute for the work habit is to be involved with community and civic affairs. Depending upon your talents and objectives, there are many volunteer positions open in charitable and religious organizations. If you are interested in challenges, these organizations offer similar ones to those in the work place.

The fun of volunteer work is that you don't have to be competitive. You do it because you want to, and so do those who work with you. It is an opportunity to meet new friends and develop new interests.

For those who feel the need to return to work, business firms find that the older worker is an asset since he or she can be depended upon and already has gained the experience needed for many jobs. Some retirees choose to become consultants and choose their own hours and periods to work. Both the company and the retiree benefit from this arrangement.

The big problem for those under age 70 is the social security limitation on how much you can earn without losing your Social Security benefit. Of course, after age 70 you can earn as much as you want, but you still have to pay the Social Security Employment tax.

Studies show that if you keep active after retirement, your life expectancy is much better than those who don't.

Seniors receive free health checks

Free health check-ups for older adults are offered by the SCANS (Senior Citizen and Nursing Services) program of the Monterey County Health Department. Persons over age 55 are eligible.

Appointments are required for the screenings, which are offered in Carmel at the Presbyterian Church; in Pacific Grove at the community center, 515 Junipero and at the Sally Judd Griffin Senior Center, 700 Jewell Ave., in New Monterey at the New Monterey Neighborhood Center.

protection of upper canopy trees has helped to enhance Carmel's beauty for now and the future. Our mayor has been an effective leader of our city and a fine representative in the community. Anyone who performs as well in office as Mayor Grace certainly deserves our vote.

Barbara Brooks' concern for the environment and her background in preservation coupled with her contined support of cultural events on the local level will be influential in enabling this community to retain the quality of life that makes it such a special place. Your vote for Barbara Brooks for the city council will be a vote for a fair-minded, forthright member of the council.

B-movie plotline

Dear Editor:

Howard Nieman's dark insinuations of takeover by the small Carmel Residents Association cabal led by former CRA president Barbara Brooks would be an interesting B-movie plotline if it weren't so ponderously silly.

No one in the CRA, especially Barbara Brooks, is hiding or slinking around about any of the pertinent issues that confront Carmel, both business and residential.

During her presidency of the CRA, all candidates and issues were given a fair hearing in publicly open meetings or forums. The object of Barbara Brooks' presidency, far from hiding anything, was rather to bring the best talent and qualified voices of the area, give them a forum to aid in the solution of our common problems in Carmel.

Aiding the democratic process in using the CRA organization to arouse public interest in confronting those problems was her task. And you must admit she did a fair and energetic job of it.

Strong leaders

Dear Editor:

Carmel will go through large changes as a result of the increasing California population and the very pleasant residential character of Carmel.

It is important during this period of change to have leaders and advisors who understand what is going on and have the strength to develop policies which will maintain the character of Carmel living.

We know from past experience that Jean Grace not only has the vision to develop policies but has shown great skill in defending her views, as for example in the recent Hatton Canyon hearing in San Francisco. We will be fortunate if we can continue to have her leadership as mayor.

The Carmel council also needs balance between business and residential advocates. The election of Barbara Brooks would go far to restore this balance.

We must retain the small residential character of Carmel.

CBA tidbits

CBA PRESIDENT Kathie Ritter reports that a campaign being lodged to locate an events coordinator is going along just fine, thank you.

Advertisements in a crosstown rival newspaper netted 25 telephone inquiries and 18 formal applications. Not bad for a job that carries with it no set salary. Calls came in from as far away as Kansas City, Mo. and parts of Connecticut.

Officially the job description asks that a person assist in fund-raising. In turn, the aforementioned will receive between 10 percent and 20 percent of the take, explains Ritter.

Ritter believes that fund-raising should take some of the pressure off of the CBA, which relies on member support and a pittance from the city, when it comes to special events, such as Christmas activities.

On another front, the CBA is currently in the process of selecting a new block captain chairperson to unify merchants.

Victoria Macy of Stefan Mann, who formerly occupied the post of block chairperson, resigned from the CBA and is dedicating her energies to the Dolores-Lincoln Breakfast Club, an informal group of merchants who meet the last Monday of each month in the Terrace Room of the Pine Inn.

Stefan Mann officials have also indicated that they will not be renewing their CBA membership.

"We are always sorry to lose members," says Ritter. "But in the meantime, the block captain program carries on."

I'm not done yet.

While the CBA office is reporting a brisk response from tourists asking about post-earthquake life in Carmel, some locals are worried about the state of affairs in the commercial district.

Take, for example, Ted Leidig, who is manning the Leidig properties while brother Bob spends the next two or three years in Singapore.

Bob, an engineer, has formerly served as a project manager for offshore oil rigs in Alaska and parts of Europe.

My point is that Ted's none too pleased with the state of affairs in Carmel.

"I think the business environment in Carmel isn't very good. And on the national level we have the possibility of a recession," he says.

Why is Ted singing the blues? It seems that five of the Leidigs' 40 or so properties are vacant.

In addition to Fortier's, which the Leidigs plan to have occupied by May after renovation, the family has two open spaces in the Court of the Fountains, one in Del Dono Court and a small (450 square foot) storefront in the alley near Flaherty's.

Just in case your're wondering, about six people have shown interest Fortier's. While Ted remains coy about who will win out for the prime locale at Ocean and Dolores, he definitely ruled out the possibility of a restaurant or drug store.

And one more thing.

At 8 a.m. Thursday, April 5, at La Playa Hotel, the general membership meeting of the CBA will feature a seminar on use of the telephone to promote your business and increase sales.

New to you... Santa Cruz-based drug store giant Vessey Drugs has set up shop near The Barnyard.

Located in the old Sprouse-Rietz building, the store features drugs plus various sundries.

Also new.

Psychotherapist Sandra Costell has opened an office at 3775 Via Nona Marie, across from the U.S. Post Office in the mouth of the valley.

For the past 15 years Costell has been helping clients in San Luis Obispo, a dozen of those at the Community Mental Health Center.

Costell specializes in individual and group counseling, as well as seminars for businesses, team building, holistic health and stress management.

Only the names have changed... Janis Padover, who most of you know for her erudite management of Carmel Pendleton, has purchased Benetton in Carmel Plaza with husband Skip.

Janis, who will also manage the store, says that she will focus on customer service and attempt to bring more locals into the fashionable boutique.

Hopefully, the store will see happier times in the coming year.

Its original owner remains in a coma as the result of an accident. And last fall Benetton purchased the space and closed it.

Now, the Padovers are ready to bring the store back to life.

"I want to keep the look but take care of the people who live here," says Janice. Continued on page 15

CARMEL YOUTH BASEBALL

By Mary Parsons

Opening Day

THE 1990 season opened last Saturday with the traditional pancake breakfast.

Carmel High's varsity softball and baseball teams were honored during Opening Day ceremonies; president Karl Pallastrini noted that the outstanding performances turned in by the high school teams reflect the good start the players received from Carmel Youth Baseball (and Carmel Valley Little League).

It was fun to see kids on those high school teams who excelled when they played at Larson Field...one more good reason for encouraging everyone to support youth baseball programs!

All of Saturday's games were jamboree or exhibition; games "for the record" began Monday and will be reported in next week's Pine Cone.

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA

APRIL 10, 1990 MUNICIPAL ELECTION

The Carmel-by-the-Sea 1990 Municipal Election will be consolidated with Special Elections held on the same date by the City of Seaside and the Salinas Alisal School District. Due to the large number of voters involved in a consolidated election, the Monterey County Election Department will not be able to provide the equipment necessary to count Carmel-by-the-Sea's ballots in the City Hall Council Chambers as had been done in prior years. The ballots will instead be counted in Salinas.

City Hall will be closed, but staff will be on duty to take phone calls and report election results. For information please call 624-2781.

A word from the valley... The Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce is boasting several new members.

These would be: Harrow & Cayce, barristers who handle real estate, family, business, landlord-tenant, personal injury, civil law and estate planning.

Rio Gril, located in The Crossroads; Nancy's Cheescakes on Carmel Rancho Boulevard; and Occupational Analysis, which features the work of Leland Smith, who has been providing career counseling for the past 18 years.

Sounds pretty to me... The Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club and CBA will begin their fifth annual beautification contest for the commercial district during the month of April.

Judging will take place Friday, April 20, with awards being presented during the CBA meeting slated for 8 a.m. Thursday, May 3, at La Playa Hotel.

Businesses taking part in the competition must use fresh and drought-tolerant materials.

Prizes will be awarded for the following categories: courtyard, entrance, patio, large area landscaping, small area landscaping and window display. The judges will also accord special recognition to businesses and inns that make outstanding contributions to their environment.

Call the CBA for an entry form at 624-2522.

PLANNING AHEAD

By Rick Tooker

Count yourself in

ONCE AGAIN it's time to conduct a "head count" of each and every person living in our great country.

Every 10 years the U.S. Bureau of Census embarks on an effort to update its information on the nation's population, housing and economic characteristics. The 1990 Decennial Census will be the 21st in the nation's history and the largest, most complex count ever undertaken involving more than 300,000 census takers and support personnel.

For Carmel-by-the-Sea, the 1990 Census provides an opportunity to reflect on the changes which have taken place in our community over the past decade and to prepare for the decade ahead. Some of the questions we will be able to answer include: Is our population growing? How fast?

It's vital that every person living in our community take part in the 1990 Census. Financially, several billion dollars in state and federal funds are dispersed to local communities. These subventions are returned to local communities based in part on population and to plan for the future needs and programs of all who live here.

How can you help? A few days before Census Day (April 1), your household will receive a questionnaire by mail. Approximately five out of six households wil receive the short form, which includes basic questions related to your age, race marital status, and so on. Approximately one out of six households will receive a longer form which asks for additional information, including education, ancestry, income, and the type of housing unit you live in.

The questionnaires take just a few minutes to fill out. Cumulative answers are published (not individual responses), so your survey will remain confidential.

To participate, all you need to do is complete the questionnaire and mail it back to the Census Bureau. For your convenience, a table will be set up at the Carmel Post Office through April 2. A census volunteer will be there to answer any questions and to help you complete your census form.

Surprise roast

THIS PAST week — right here in Monterey — I witnessed the presentation of several Oscars to a surprised winner, and felt a tropical Heat Wave move into Pebble Beach — if ever so briefly.

Red Cross supporters and the elite group who wear white toques both dined out, separately and sumptuously. The cream of the art colony came out in honor of one of their own. All this, along with the hottest and latest news of a future event.

Speaking of Oscars, one winner took them all at a local ceremony just a few days before Hollywood held the world spellbound. He won best actor for Good Ship Lollipop (receiving a giant-sized lollipop); for best international production The Last Emporer (a Buddha holding flags of China and Taiwan). He received a box of Morton salt and an umbrella for "Morton Gould Special Effects" (actually the award went to God but he accepted for Her). "The Missing Appetizer Award" (for "Lost on The Orient Express"), brought him a can of sardines. "Veggies of Wrath" for Gourmet Gala No. 1 brought a bouquet of same and "Worst Award of the Decade" gave him the coveted plow disk for Galas No. 2, 3, and 4.

His fans wanted him to have the "Roseanne Barr Award" and the academy allowed it only if it didn't last too long. So, he received a life-size pig carved in ice.

The "Top Secret" invitations revealed no name but those 'in-the-know' knew it was for Robert (Bob) Mikolitch, director of catering at the Monterey Sheraton. Bob had been told that the dinner was "a surprise roast" for Artie Early.

As soon as the 100 private party guests were seated in the Sheraton Ballroom, Emcee Sherrie McCullough received a telegram from London (where Artie and Lee are on vacation), stating that Artie was sorry she could not attend the dinner for "The King of the Evening — Bob Mikolitch."

Elisa Booth and Lucille Huntington (dressed as ladies of the evening), brought the red-faced baffled Bob to the stage to crown him. Sherrie presented him with "one fork" with which to enjoy the dinner.

During the salad, Parade of Pasta, and the main course, the fun began, with the staff moving photos of Bob as a baby and small child from table to table. (Bob's Mother in Mass. provided the photos). The winning personality that so many have learned to love was easily detected in every photo.

John Baldwin started the roast by saying to Bob "This Is Your Life" and to the audience "The Truth About Bob": "I talked to his friends — both of them," John said. "Actually, I talked to 16 but 14 asked not to be identified.

"Bob started off teaching in a private elementary school, then he became a bartender and finally entered the Boston Sheraton training program and soon earned the coveted G.R. Rating. I thought that stood for 'great reliability' but, oh no, it meant 'good riddance.'

"Many of Bob's admirers made comments such as: Bob sits in meetings with an open mind and you can feel the draft...He's so cheap that when he goes on an ego trip he travels tourist...He's always late — a family tradition. His ancestors came over on the June-flower. He's such a loser he won't even be included in his wedding pictures."

John ended with "Thanks, Bob, for being such a great sport and such an interesting target for a roast. The audience is tangible evidence of how much we treasure our relationship with you."

Head Honcho Bill Hurley was very funny and fellow DOC David Stamm said, "The centerpieces of dead flowers and twinkle lights remind me of you, Bob." Marnie Marks (of MIIS) presented him with the Bob Mikolitch Chair for Cross-cultural Understanding" (which is taught at the institute — cross-cultural understanding, that is), for speaking "corporate and non-profit" cultural languages. Examples: freebies, discount, no-charge, donate-a-room, etc. Bob was heard to mutter, "I wish Artie could have been here tonight."

Sue Dewar presented Bob with the bill for the dinner. She had misread the text: as "Catering Director of the Decade" Bob fits the bill. She thought it read foots the bill. And, at the end Connie (Sherrie) Chung was introduced, saying she had been signing autographs in the lobby but wanted to thank Honcho Hurley for hosting the social hour. Sherrie presented the guest of honor with a specially designed Curoc tray "Director of Catering of the Decade — Robert Mikolitch."

Bob, at long last, was allowed to stand in front of the gold curtain. He said, "I've never been in a room full of people before who could pronounce my last name correctly. Had I known the dinner was for me we would have had lobster. And, I'm going to phone my mother tomorrow about those baby pictures."

The unusual evening was a "first" and Peggy Compton was the one who came up with the idea. People from various organizations (March of Dimes, Friends of MIIS, MP Museum, County Symphony, MC Cultural Council, Friends of Hospice, LifeSavers and others), were delighted to be able to pay tribute to someone who was just doing his job, albeit, someone who was doing his job far above and beyond the call of duty.

Bob Mikolitch has made a great contribution to the community and the warm feeling is special when someone, who least expects it, is given a deserved tribute by his friends.

SUE DEWAR presented a mock Newsweek cover to DOC (Director of Catering) of the Decade award to Bob Mikolitch at his surprise roast.

BOB MIKOLITCH'S boss, "Honcho" Hurley used a chain as part of his hilarious contribution to the roast.

CAROL BENTON brought a smile to the honoree's face at roast at Monterey Sheraton.

in force when one of their greats opens a show. Especially, when it is Eve Tartar's largest show ever — 50 pieces.

This fine artist, after studying with several great teachers, soon found her own distinctive style and that's what makes a true artist.

There's nothing as exciting as seeing her "Path of No Coming and No Going," "Moon of the Mermaids", "Calapers of Time", and her "Cosmos Eggs." As well as the five-piece construction created especially for one wall at the Carmel Mission Inn where the exhibit will be on view for the next three weeks. All pieces were inspired by the universe and have universal appeal.

Last year, it was a return to the '50s when The Lodge was turned into Mel's Drive In. This year, "A Heat Wave" will breeze into the Inn at Spanish Bay on April 20th.

Dinah Shore came last spring and $50,000 was raised to help prevent teen suicides. This year Tony "Yellow Ribbon" Orlando will be featured entertainer. The Beach Boys are returning again as Bruce Johnston reassured the LifeSavers Committee at the Beach Club in Pebble. Bruce said, "I promose to return for, 'We're Havin' A Heat Wave' fund-raiser, unless," he said with eyes twinkling, "I'm out working on my house payments."

Barry Cowsill with his guitar entertained the LifeSavers committee members at the Beach Club luncheon. He started out with When Irish Eyes Are Smiling and ended with Shake, Rattle & Roll accompanied by LifeSaver Charlie Keeley at the keyboard. Someone pointed out that Charlie was playing in court earlier that morning (she's an attorney).

The LifeSavers are raising money for the expansion of education to save the lives of our youth (ages 15-24). The educational program, carried out through the Suicide Prevention Crisis Center, has been successful where used. Suicide is the number two killer of young people and the plan is to go nationwide with the four-phased project.

When you request a fork from your waiter in a restaurant and your waiter turns out to be a Superior Court judge, or a Congressman, or an Assemblyman, or a state Senator, it places a different connotation on dining out.

And, when the total price for the finest dinner possible is only 60 totally tax-deductible dollars, that adds another special dimension. Especially, when it is due to the generosity of the restaurant owners and the beneficiary is the local chapter of The American Red Cross.

The generous businessmen were Ted Balestreri and Bert Cutino (and their wonderful staff), who welcomed 100 Red Cross supporters to The Sardine Factory. The "talking part" of the evening agenda was kept short by general manager Perry Falahati. Ted, Bert and (cellar master) Andrea Fulton kept remarks to a minimum as did Red Cross director Lynn Sweerie, who said, "I have a certificate of appreciation for the co-owners of The Sardine Factory and I know you are all hungry and anxious to eat."

Ted had introduced the celebrity servers, who were lined up in Sardine Factory aprons with their names embroidered at the top. Superior Court Judge Bill Wonderful, I mean Wunderlich, state Sen. Henry Mello, Assemblymen Rusty Areias, Sam Farr and Eric Seastrand and U.S. Rep. Leon Panetta.

With only five minutes of training the service left nothing to be desired and was forthcoming with smiles, courtesy and speed. Ted said, "Pay no attention that their hands are marked 'right' and 'left.' We had to do that so they would remember to 'serve from the left and pick up from the right.'"

What a feast Bert whipped up for the 100 guests from all over the county. Every morsel a delight to the palate, causing Del Rey Oaks Mayor Robert Franco to dub Bert "the Michelangelo of the kitchen." Hear! Hear! Complementary wines were donated by Jerry Lohr and Charles and Sandra Chrietzberg.

This was not the only occasion this past week for the joy of dining. Six round mirrored tables each with a tall silver epergne topped with four candles, pink and yellow flowers with delicate Boston fern floating over the sides, were set in The Lodge Library in Pebble.

The small select group are members of an exclusive organization of only 1,800 people in 83 countries. I'm sure, by now, you have guessed that it was a gathering of the Monterey Chapter of Les Toques Blanches (LTB) International. And, who else would be a better selection to prepare dinner than Chef of the Year Beat Giger? No one.

Mr. Giger not only created an unusual menu but one that delighted the most discerning cuisine connoisseurs in central and northern California. Members Carl H. Wendt of St. Francis Yacht Club and Alfred Saarne of Machaels in Sunnyvale were there from the north.

After a champagne reception, outgoing president Gernot Leitzinger and incoming president Heinz Fanderl initiated three inductees. Julio Ramirez (Fishwife restaurants in PG and Seaside), Gary Davis (food and beverage director, The Lodge), and Henri Gervais (Gervais Restaurant, San Jose). Mike Cassidy, Hyatt Regency Monterey was unable to attend.

Bert Cutino (LTB senior director), was the first American to attend an LTB meeting in London where he was appointed to the board for five years. He was pleased that timing allowed him to attend the dinner at The Lodge before he left for a convention in Singapore.

Mr. Cutino was been working with Rep. Leon Panetta to attain a culinary postal stamp and to establish a "Culinary Week" to honor the chefs of America. A plaque making him an honorary member of LTB was presented to Mr. Panetta, who said, "My family ran a restaurant and I worked there when I was young. In my present job, I have a lot in common with chefs. We both work close to the stove where it's hot, we can't take holidays and we both have to please everybody."

He added, "I'm wearing my 'going-back-to-Washington-suit' and will probably stick some broccoli in my lapel."

Beat Giger revealed some secret ingredients in the six-course dinner. That is, all except the surprise dessert (it turned out to be a spectacular gold-covered chocolate torte). Tom Hlasny (Southern Wine Spirits), spoke of the wines served. He surprised everyone with his selection of an 1985 Kendall Jackson Johannesberg Reisling to complement the NY state "Foie Gras with Chanterelle Mushrooms." Surprising, but a delightful choice.

The unusual and superb main dish was Veal Loin with Lobster Medallion. Can't list all courses, however, each was an unusual, creative culinary art.

Truly a special evening for special people of our area.

Roderick L. Dewar, serving for the past two years as president of the Monterey County Cultural Council, was commended for his outstanding contribution to the arts at a meeting at La Mirada. Commendations were presented by the MCCC, the Board of Supervisors and the State Senate Rules Committee.

John Totten, current president, submitted a letter to the board, commending Veronica Flores (MCCC secretary), for her outstanding administrative efforts, which was unanimously approved. (Note photo.)

A Close-Up look at government

"THE RESPONSIBILITY of each citizen is what makes or breaks the system," said Leon Panetta while addressing a group of Carmel High students who visited Washington, D.C. with the Close-Up program.

The group, consisting of 34 Carmel High students, joined other high school students from Northern California, Minnesota, New Mexico and Florida for a one-week look at our American government.

The vigorous itinerary consisted of daily seminars, tours, and private sessions with congressmen and other government officials. Each student was able to spend a day on Capitol Hill and sit in on sessions of the House of Representatives and the Senate. Some of the students felt that watching the House and the Senate was far from what they expected. At times, only four or five representatives would be present discussing an almost incomprehensible topic. However, it gave the observers a chance to see how the sessions actually ran.

Capitol Hill opened the eyes of many high schoolers to the complexity of our national government. Vicki Harrison, a Carmel High Close-Up participant, felt that spending the day surrounded by government officials was a tremendous experience. "There are so many people involved in our government," she said. "They really work hard and you can tell they really care."

Seeing all the sights and listening to the sounds of Washington, D.C. made a great impact on many of the students. Margaret Snow, ASB president, feels, "It made me want to be involved in our government. Being on Capitol Hill and having open access to many of the committees made me realize the vast accessibility of the American government; it's right there!"

One of the many sights that the Close-Up participants visited was the Pentagon. They attended a seminar on defense where officers from the Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps, and the Air Force were all open for questioning. "The Pentagon was nothing like I had imagined," Harrison commented. "I imagined walls and walls of computers, but what I saw was a shoe-shine stand, a bakery, and a few stores." The students were not given a full tour of the Pentagon. With 200 Close-Up members, it would have been too difficult.

One of the major highlights of the trip for the Carmel High students was the private session with Rep. Leon Panetta. He discussed local issues such as the proposed closing of Fort Ord, which he is against, and the ever-controversial Hatton Canyon Freeway proposal. Panetta discussed the importance of the individual in government, and his hopes for maintaining the Monterey Peninsula as a beautiful place to live and to work.

As much as the Close-Up students saw in a week, there is still more to be seen. "Every student should have the opportunity to go to Washington, D.C.," Margaret feels. "I'd go again, if I could." Pictures in history books and television programs just don't show the tradition and excitement behind our government and the city of Washington.

The trip home from Washington, D.C. was a story in itself. Most students were awake for 23 hours of plane delays, blizzards, flight switches before arriving nine hours late. Not only did they arrive at the wrong airport, so did their luggage.

This unbearable trip home was not the best way to end the Close-Up experience, but still most of the weary travelers agreed, it was worth it. "Coming back from the Close-Up experience, makes you want to become aware of our national government and the political events that constantly affect us."

TAKE MY WORD FOR IT

By D. Patrick Gallagher

Adaft, you lubbers

DO I detect a sign of spring in the air? The breezes are softer, the sun is out and it's time to scrape the barnacles off our bottoms and get ready for sailing weather.

Don't be taken aback, it's the bottoms of our boats I'm talking about. Taken aback is a nautical term. When the sails of a square-rigged ship are carried back by the wind against the mast, the ship is taken aback and stopped dead in the water. We, too, react similarly at some event or new development. Our boats must be in A-1 condition, of course. The reason is when the marine insurance firms, later known as Lloyd's of London, started a register of ships and cargoes, they assigned a rating sytem to each category. The ships were rated by letter and the cargoes by number, beginning with A and 1 as the highest ratings.

The term aboveboard, meaning a person is honest and forthright, is not a nautical term. It refers to card players who are assumed to be playing honestly, so long as their hands remain above the table and in plain view. Overboard does have a nautical meaning, the "board," in this case, being the deck of the ship. Aboard is a corruption of "on the board," or on deck.

Henry Beard and Roy McKie, two witty old salts, have published Sailing: A Dictionary for Landlubbers, which puts everything about the sport into proper perspective. As is aboard, they point out the nautical prefix a indicates a condition or direction. As such, a drifting boat is adrift and something off to the side of a boat is abaft. Carrying their logic to the edge of lunacy they continue with abash, toward another boat (often converting your pride and joy into a liquid asset; columnist's addition); awhiff, toward an area of low tide; aglub, sinking; aduff, seated; adaft, unbalanced boat or skipper; and abarf, under the weather.

I suppose abandon is as good a definition as any for the wild state in which one acquires a boat. It is said that sailors' two happiest moments are when they buy a boat and when they sell it. We sailors have to be a little bit nuts. Anyone who wants to spend a day getting wet and becoming ill while going nowhere slowly at great expense really isn't flying a full mainsheet upstairs. Whenever my wife, Viki, and I sail together, she won't allow me to use all these wonderful nautical terms I've spent hours memorizing.

"Hoist the jib," I shout in my best Horatio Nelson demeanor.

"Is that the big one or the little one?" she asks, bored.

"Coming to starboard," I cry again, unfazed by her disrespectful attitude.

"The left one or right one?" she asks.

Auxiliary refers to anything on board a boat which is in the way when not needed, or missing when it is. This is a good definition of our children.

Beard and McKie make an interesting distinction between cockpit and cocktails. The cockpit is the open area at the stern of the boat from which it is steered to the desired destination. Cocktails are the desired destination. Drinking is expressly forbidden on our boat and I am notoriously lacking in tolerance for those unable to distinguish a boat from a bar. Besides, it leads to the dreaded condition known as bulkhead.

One must always be alert on board a sailboat to watch for obstacles and inclement weather. Plenty of extra clothing is brought aboard for sudden changes in temperature. A "sou-wester" is a combination of vinyl coat, pants and hat, usually yellow in color and designed to keep you dry in a gale. A "nor-easter," on the other hand, is a combination of shorts and a sweatshirt with the words "Harvard or Yale" written across its front.

One may be intrigued by the various models of sailing ships extant in nautical museums. One of the more curious varieties is the one cut in half and which displays the workings of each deck. Beard and McKie tell us, historically, its employment by boat builders unfamiliar with the basic concept led to considerable delay in its wider acceptance since the first half-ships constructed from half-models tended to sink immediately after launching.

We'll end our little sailing venture with a reminder for all those enamored of owning a sailboat with its classic definition: A sailboat is a hole in the water surrounded by wood or fiberglass and into which one pours money. There are alternatives to owning, of course. There are clubs and sailing associations which will rent you a boat, at $100 a day and up...but if you have the cash, it's "Hello, Sailor!"

I STAND corrected. Jack Kennedy of the Carmel Planning Commission was the first to call me to say I erred in naming Frank Cavanaugh as the regimental commander of the 69th New York Infantry in the First World War.

He remembers the regiment's commander was "Wild Bill" Donovan, who in WW II was put in charge of the famed OSS. Donovan transferred to the 69th from the 1st Cavalry and became a battalion commander at the beginning of America's involvement with the war. After a short departure to recuperate from wounds, Donovan returned to take command of the regiment, but that was after hostilities had ceased. Nevertheless, as a battalion commander in the 69th, Donovan was decorated with the French Croix de Guerre, the Distinguished Service Cross with oak leaf cluster, at least two Purple Hearts and the nation's highest award, the Congressional Medal of Honor. Douglas McArthur never forgave Donovan for winning more combat medals than he won.

Richard Dunlop writes, "General Pershing drove to Remagen to review the Rainbow Division. When he came to the 69th...he saw the silver battle furls which covered the flag staff from the silk of the colors to the lowest tip (the staff had been extended a full foot to allow room for the nearly 100 streamers, one for each of the regiment's battles). "What regiment is this?" demanded Pershing.

"The 69th New York, sir," was the reply.

"The Irish," Pershing said. "Now I understand."

When the 69th came home, Donovan led it down New York's Fifth Avenue to the strains of Killarney, Garry Owen, Father O'Flynn and other Irish tunes and marches while New Yorkers lined the street "six deep" to welcome them home and to watch as they passed into history.

that go down the residential neighborhoods and down Ocean Avenue" emit a lot of exhaust, she added.

"We certainly want to maintain as many trees as we can, especially downtown to keep the look of Carmel. I think we have to be careful about the facade of the shops," Ramsey said.

Ramsey said she is not opposed to the city making purchases of open space, but she believes "when we are talking about big dollars of the taxpayers money, the public should have input," she said.

She added that she did not believe that asking the public about buying a property would affect the price.

"I really don't think so," she said.

MPTV CABLE LAUNCHES DRIVE FOR HOSPICE

Monterey Peninsula TV Cable launches its third annual charity drive April 1st. This year's campaign will support Hospice of The Central Coast.

In conjunction with National Cable Month, MPTV will offer free standard installation of up to two cable outlets to new subscribers, or free installation of an additional outlet to existing cable subscribers who donate $15 or more to Hospice of The Central Coast. A standard installation is normally $44.95. The offer is available April 1-30.

Hospice of the Central Coast provides a program of total care to patients with life-threatening illnesses and their families, through home services, a resource center and an in-patient facility in Carmel Valley.

"We hope to raise over $25,000 to support patient care services and to increase public awareness of the vital role of Hospice in our community," said Salvatore Balesteri, president of MPTV Cable.

Home Box Office, Inc. will donate an additional $5 for each HBO and Cinemax unit installed during April. Showtime Networks Inc. will do likewise for each installation of Showtime of The Movie Channel.

"The annual fund-raising drives enable us to "give back" to the community in a meaningful way," said Balesteri. "Everyone in the company gets involved because it's a way of showing the public that cable cares."

JAPANESE SPRING FESTIVAL SET FOR MARCH 31

The Japanese Language School of the Monterey Peninsula Japanese-American Citizens League (JACL) will present Haru Matsuri (Spring Festival Children's Fair) featuring hands-on Japanese arts and crafts for children Saturday, March 31.

The Haru Matsuri (Spring Festival) Children's Fair is an opportunity for children to explore and learn about Japanese culture. The name Haru Matsuri (Spring Festival) has been chosen because the spring season coincides with Girl's Day (March 3) and Boy's Day (May 5) in Japan.

The focus of the festival will be hands-on experiences for children in Japanese arts and crafts. Featured will be origami (Japanese paper folding), gyotaku (fish printing), and koinobori (Boys' Day carp wind socks). Other activities include demonstrations of calligraphy, origami, sushi making. Special showings of Japanese paper slide shows (children's fairy tales both Japanese and English), and Japanese children's videos. A game room where Japanese games are taught, and a pedagogic exhibit for the Monterey Japanese Language School where interested children and adults may inquire about classes.

Don't forget the culinary delights of ethnic foods. If you come early, you may find sekihan, chirashi sushi, inarizushi, omochi, shumai, norimaki, ohagi as well as traditional teriyaki chicken. And, in keeping with children's emphasis of the festival, Japanese junk food.

There will also be Japanese theme handcrafted items for sale in the children's store at children's prices and also in the Japanese gift store at adult prices.

The Haru Matsuri Spring Festival will be held Saturday, March 31, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. (rain or shine, all festival activities are indoors), at the Japanese-American Citizens League (JACL) Hall, 424 Adams St., Monterey. Free admission. Call Walt Uwate (Japanese Language School Board member and chairperson of Haru Matsuri 1990), at 375-0859 for further information.

"A time of great contrasting values, poverty, illness, wars and a hopeless sense about our life and its direction. While on the other hand, a tremendous upsurge of mankind's true potential to live in accord with all the laws of nature and resolve all outer conflict by unfolding one's own inner resource. The resolution of these two apparent conflicting values makes life truly a joy."

Unify community

Dear Editor:

I was extremely impressed with Barbara Brooks' presentation at the candidates' forum held on March 1 by the Carmel Business Association. She had clearly done her homework, and effectively addressed the topics as outlined by the CBA.

Barbara consistently attends the CBA meetings and understands the concerns of the business community. I believe that as the past president of the Carmel Residents Association she can help to unify the community.

I think that Barbara Brooks would be fair and willing to tackle the tough issues facing Carmel until a consensus or compromise can be reached.

A clear choice

Dear Editor:

Annexation? Should Carmel-by-the-Sea be maintained for the future as a small village of one square mile, or should strong efforts be made to annex adjacent surrounding regions? Not only does this topic have implications for the future of the village but it is a major issue in the current mayoral campaign.

Elinor Laiolo is strongly opposed to encouraging annexation, believing that it is much better for current residents to keep the village within its current boundaries. Jean Grace is on public record as encouraging annexation to force the village to grow to its "natural" boundaries thus creating a small city.

Here is one issue on which Carmel voters have a clear choice.

Jewel of America

Dear Editor:

The realtors know. The developers know:

Many Big Money People from Asia, Germany, and elsewhere are taking options to buy our most valuable property south of Carmel River, as well as Carmel Valley.

They are poised, and ready to move on the most beautiful, scenic property all the way down to Hearst Castle. Why not? It is the prize of all America. All they need is Highway 1 to open up, south of Carmel River. They have the money to take the salt out of the ocean water — and they would. So, what, who will stop them?

To simply widen Highhway 1 from Ocean to Rio, with easy movement to Carmel Valley, via underpass, will resolve our local problems. These options takers are counting on, financing and depending on the freeway to move on down our coast. They are lobbying Caltrans, and every branch of government that has clout, to put Hatton Canyon through, and, soon.

Just think of the billions of dollars to be made. Hotels, motels, mansions and estates, restaurants, malls, condos, service stations. All those great jobs created! You and I would not be able to buy them — even rent such a condo for one month — but all the millionaires of the world would flock to buy a second home, just as they are doing in Manhatton, Aspen, Palm Springs.

Then come the oil rigs. Why not? Every one of us, trying to hold the tide, will have given up — as in the South. These homes will sell easily, for $4 million, as a current ad states, for a 'unique estate' near Rocky Point.

How many years would it take, for the entire coast, all the way down to Santa Barbara to build up? Ten, maybe 20 years? They can cut down the trees, shave the bluffs and reinforce with concrete, and then there will be room for all our TV stars, athletes, movie stars and singers to fill in, as they have in Santa Monica. The diamond merchants, traders from all the world, can also have a piece of the 'Jewel of America' — but not I, nor my grandchildren most probably. Couldn't afford it!

How long has it been since you drove down our coast? Please do — straight down Highway 1 to Mexico. We did recently. Look at the most beautiful coast in all the world. Then, look at what man has done as you get further south. See all the oil rigs offshore? Look at all the hills, covered with houses and walls. Try to drive their four and six-lanes from Santa Barbara to San Diego. Look at mile after mile of ticky tacky, buildings over every bluff. You can't get near the water, for commercial concrete. Bumper to bumper.

What will be the legacy we leave for our children?

Now, right now, is the time for the right decision. Before it's too late, look at and recognize who are the players behind the scene. Think, plan ahead, educate yourself — it is crucial! Now!

Wake up, Californians!

Muriel Miller

Determined candidate

Dear Editor:

Carmel-by-Sea residents are indeed fortunate to have a mayoral candidate as determined as is Elinor Laiolo to get as much citizen input as possible before council decisions are made on their behalf.

Councilwoman Laiolo is to be congratulated for placing the matter of Cal-Am's requested rate increase on the April council agenda before the local PUC hearing which has been scheduled for mid-April.

Cal-Am has requested that the $1.5 million cost of preliminary studies for the speculative Canada reservoir be paid by consumers before it has even been reasonably determined that water can ever be delivered from that source.

Thanks to Elinor, village residents will have an opportunity to express their views on the equity of this request.

Hodges perspective

Dear Editor:

As a former member of the Carmel City Council, I wish to put into perspective some data regarding the purchase of the Hodges property.

Negotiations for this land between the Hodges interests and the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea started over 20 years ago.

In 1969 the city and Hodges entered into a five-year option agreement that gave the city first refusal for acquisition. In December 1973 the city General Plan mentions acquisition of the property for "public holdings." August 1976, a unanimously appointed committee worked on acquisition of the property. The city did a potential use site survey in November 1976. February 1978 found the city entering into another five-year lease agreement, with the right of first refusal to purchase.

The May 1978 acquisition report to the city council included the Hodges property. A 1979 Coastal Commission report mentions the desirability of the city acquiring the Hodges property. July 1979 the council authorized annexation proceedings. A memo from the city attorney in November 1979 discusses the "contemplated purchase" of the property.

July 1980 staff recommends the purchase and annexation of the Hodges property. Meetings with the Hodges Trust continue in July of 1989 and in August 1989, Mayor Grace releases a statement asking the council to "initiate the process...explore possible acquisition of the Hodges property..."

City council continues to negotiate and study the purchase, then in October 1989 unanimously authorized an offer to be made. Later in 1989 there were public hearings, and conformity with the General Plan was established. Purchase completed, Jan. 30, 1990.

As noted, negotiations with a public entity can be a slow process; thankfully we have had mayors and city councils that have hung in there and accomplished, in this case, the most good for the most people.

Thank you Mayor Grace for your continuing leadership.

'Spec' houses

Dear Editor:

The records of the Carmel Planning Department show that 80 percent of the new homes in Carmel built in the past few years are "spec" houses. In addition, as anyone can see by the names on the trucks, the large majority of the "spec" houses are built by contractors from Fresno, Bakersfield, Sacramento and other faraway cities.

These giant three and four-bedroom houses with one-car garages on standard Carmel lots are not providing off-street parking for their potential occupants, an already serious problem for Carmel. These oversized houses preclude the possibility of enough air space or root space for canopy trees which ironically could have been the reason the buyers were attracted to Carmel in the first place.

If we are seriously concerned about the exploding rate of these giant "spec" houses, the total lack of even rudimentary design control, and the indifference to the future of Carmel's urban forest, then it is essential that we provide every possible means of support for Barbara Brooks for city council. Although all candidates claim to be interested in the future of Carmel, it is the actual record of these candidates on these specific issues of house size, the urban forest and off-street parking that really matters.

Who is to define the future of Carmel — the speculation builders from out of town or the citizens of Carmel?

Vance Frasier

Diversity of opinion

Dear Editor:

Diversity of opinion has never harmed the United States over the nearly 400 years that have passed since the fist permanent settlers made it in Jamestown, back there in 1607. And differences of view are still with us today as witnessed by opinions expressed pro and con on almost any matter of public interest in the pages of your paper. Of course, some of them are wrong (because, obviously, they differ from my own), but we accept the right of the beknighted to express those opinions unto the death.

To bring you up to date on the bad, the good, and the uncertain please note:

Bad: 1. Spending $600,000 for the "park" on Dolores when greater civic needs abounded.

2. Redividing the Gamble property to avoid 11 small lots with small houses in order to have eight big lots with great big houses.

3. Worrying incessantly about the size of a house to be allowed on a 40 X 100 ft lot — should it be 1,600 feet or 1,400 feet — as if anyone, the architect included, could tell the difference.

Good: 1. Buying the bank for the library annex to finally settle the issue that had lingered for many years.

2. Buying the lumberyard to avoid the collection of planned condos. Whether the park itself will have much value is to be seen but it is surely better than a great collection of new housing units crammed together.

3. Buying the Hodges property. As it is just over the city line, it probably couldn't have been taken by eminent domain and with purchase we have avoided the lengthy arguments that surely would have enslued had someone bought and tried to develop it with houses or condos. Now in its own time the city can annex the land and if nothing else, keep it vacant from housing usage. In 15 years time the local residents will surely consider this to have been a proper public purchase, never mind the price.

To be Decided: 1. The question of what to do with Highway 1. Expansion seems ridiculous to me but I don't live on it or near Hatton Canyon so my interest is only in traffic, not maintaining my current level of noise and traffic confusion. I am surely not wild about the exit area at the bottom of the hill, especially as it applies to the Rio Road area (but that becomes a personal note there as I use that street daily to cross the highway.)

2. Parking in downtown Carmel. Having lived here for 17 years and going downtown several times a week by auto, I have come to question if there is a major parking problem at all. Surely, if I lived south of Eighth Street I would like the employee parking removed but low-paid shop workers won't spend money to park in a city garage if they can continue to park on the street. Forcing them off the street harms their economic well-being and probably pushes them down to 10th, etc. I saw this happen in Westwood in the late '40s while attending UCLA and I think it just moves the problem rather than curing it.

I find that I can always get a parking place within a block of where I want to go, albeit often times it is a green spot. But for local folks, that may be enough. I suspect that "the parking problem" has been spoken of for so long that it is now taken as a "given" that it truly exists. Perhaps before deciding on a "solution" we should once again determine if we have a "problem" that needs a solution.

How about it out there? Let's hear some more diverse opinion. Even though I am right in the above, of course.

Kenneth Bullock
Carmel

Part of the past

Dear Editor:

We have a rare opportunity to save a bit of Old Carmel. Granted, with development here starting in the late 1880s there are no really old houses, but the Murphy house, built in 1902, is one of the oldest and the prototype of a majority of the early houses built in our city.

Unfortunately all that the curious can see of it without trespassing is a mass of green foliage. It is not a ramshackle shack, but an important part of our heritage and deserves to be moved to where it can be used and enjoyed.

Spending time, as I do, as a volunteer in the Whalers Cabin at Point Lobos I can attest to the interest people feel to be able to see a part of the past which has survived. We are fortunate that a building of that age still exists so near the center of the commercial district in a condition that close to its original state, and I hope that a satisfactory place will be determined for its relocation, and I hope that the city council, the owner of the property or the planning commission will give it a stay of execution so that an irreplaceable part of our past won't be lost to us forever.

Retrogression

Dear Editor:

A vote for Barbara Brooks can lead us back to the old straightjacket we were in during the Townsend administration.

She represents the same group, led by the CRA that is promoting her and seeking power. They are mostly relative newcomers to Carmel compared to others of 15, 20, and 30 years or more experience with the Carmel government.

A different story

Dear Editor:

In his letter to the Pine Cone (March 22), which you captioned as "Twisting the facts," Mr. Olof Dahlstrand maintains that the Eastwood's city government's attitude toward commercial expansion and new residential development was not "loose and permissive." Mr. Dahlstrand further asserts that it was also untrue that there was very little design review, but instead "a stepped-up level of design review was instituted."

As an Eastwood appointee to the planning commission, as well as the committee formed to reshape the General Plan, Mr. Dahlstrand certainly is in a position to know what that administration's policy was. Perhaps time (or an impending election), has dimmed his memory, for the public record tells a different story.

The General Plan Committee, as reported in the Feb. 26, 1987 Pine Cone, recommended deleting residential design review from the 1984 General Plan policy PI-22. The committee justified this action in their interim report dated June 27, 1986 and specifically stated, "Thus residential design review serves no useful purpose which cannot better be achieved and more easily managed through the former system of limits on height, floor area, setbacks and land coverage."

Local political pundit and frequent Pine Cone contributor, Howard C. Nieman Jr. was so alarmed by the committee's agenda that he urged Mayor Eastwood in a letter dated June 30, 1986 to "reject the interim report of the General Plan Committee and promptly dissolve this committee." Mr. Nieman went on to say, "The committee has supported, virtually without exception, every proposal made which assists future commercial development of Carmel," an opinion which was shared by many residents in subsequent public hearings.

General Plan Committee Chairman Bob Evans was more forthright than Mr. Dahlstrand. When asked by the Pine Cone if the General Plan was weakened by the changes, he responded, "It was intended to be."

YORK SCHOOL ANNOUNCES NEW HEADMASTER

The York School Board of Trustees has announced the appointment of Dr. Richard D. Enemark as headmaster of The York School effective Aug. 1, 1990.

Enemark received his doctorate with Highest Distinction and his master's of philosophy in English from Columbia University. He received his master's in English from the University of Vermont, and his bachelor's degree from Colgate University where he was elected for Phi Beta Kappa. He was awarded teaching fellowships at all three universities. Most recently he has been academic dean, and dean of the faculty at Noble & Greenough School, in Dedham, Mass.

Before being recruited to Noble and Greenough, he was headmaster at Elizabeth Irwin High School in New York City. Prior to that he was director of teaching fellows at Phillips Academy, Andover in Mass. From 1980-85 he served as an instructor and coordinator at Columbia University. From 1974-80 he served as director of studies and coordinator of college admissions for Burke Mountain Academy, a school for international level ski racers in Vermont. Enemark has taught at both the university and independent school level and brings an understanding of educational leadership in and out of the classroom to York.

"The truly great school invests its every day with the exceptional. York's intellectual excellence, coupled with the independence of spirit nurtured and advanced by its faculty and students, make it a place where the ordinary day becomes an extraordinary time for learning. My choice is to join that enterprise and my challenge is to advance that potential," he said.

Jon Raggett, chairman of the Head Search Committee, a group of 19 members representing all of York constituencies, worked with Julia Hirsch, senior vice president of Boyden International, to identify a large pool of exceptional candidates. Over 300 people were contacted about the position and over 60 were seriously considered. Leading candidates were given personal interviews in their home towns and a select number were invited to campus, first to be interviewed by the committee and then to the York community as a whole.

Enemark succeeds Dr. Henry M. Littlefield who became headmaster at York in 1976 and will retire in July, 1990.

The York School is an Episcopal day school which offers a co-educational college preparatory education of high intellectual quality, based on a traditional curriculum. The school welcomes those who are academically qualified without regard to race, creed, or economic background. This year there are 174 students in grades eight through 12. The 1989-90 school year celebrates York's 30th anniversary.

SLOAT CHAPTER NSDAR HOSTED LUNCHEON

An American heritage afternoon called "From Spinning Wheels to Potpourri" was a busy one for the Commodore Sloat Chapter, NSDAR. The March luncheon meeting was held at the First Presbyterian Church in Monterey. Program chairman Barbara Blevens of Carmel Valley had several events scheduled which intermeshed successfully.

The first was hearing from members who had brought collections or precious family memorabilia to be used as table centerpieces...antique china, daguerreotypes of ancestors, cookbooks, pressed glass, antique sterling silver, spoons, even a collection of old postcards, all from Watsonville, were displayed on white linen tablecloths belonging to the chairman.

Vera Hering of Monterey, chapter conservation chairman, presented a program on potpourri with her assistant Mary Ann Duncan tending steaming potpourri pots throughout the room. Hering discussed how to create different scents as she explained the ancient art of potpourri assisted by Carol Todd.

Woven into the afternoon was a silent auction of treasures and a Spinning Wheel Salad luncheon prepared by chairman Judy Wing of Pacific Grove.

An opportunity was also taken to present a check for more than $300 to the Family History Center, Seaside in appreciation of their assistance in the recent 9th annual genealogical seminar. Mrs. Gerald Lindsey accepted the donation, as incoming chairman of volunteers there.

Alida Lehman, chapter regent, in an abbreviated business meeting reported on the recent DAR State Conference in Costa Mesa wherein chapter member Mrs. Harry F. H. Jones had been elected state vice regent for the next two years. She announced that the next meeting will be held in the La Novia room, NPS, on April 17th. Marion Flaherty, program chairman, will introduce guest speaker, Thomas Tonkin, president of CHOMP. Social hour at 11:30, luncheon at noon.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Marriages made in heaven deserve a gold star

From March 26, 1981
Carmel Pine Cone

Oh almighty and eternal God, we humbly ask thee as our loving Father to bless all Rotarians gathered here and be pleased to bless the food we partake and the drink we quaff.

We know that in your paternal solitude no thought of theirs is left unguarded, no tear unheeded, no joy unnoticed.

Recently, a Rotarian told me his wife was the light of his life. I told him that these words had a nice poetic ring like a St. Valentine's Day card. Seriously, he said that before his marriage he lived in a kind of physical and mental darkness. "My wife not only brought me out of darkness, she forced me to be a light."

There are various types of light; the artificial light that gives us a headache. There is the blinding light that frightens robbers. There is the limelight that some men demand and some wives give them. My Rotarian friend said that his ideal wife was none of these. Rather, she was a good and godly woman, a giving person and that she had taught him to share.

Oh Lord, help us to bring that kind of light and love to each other; husband to wife, wife to husband, friend to friend and even to our enemies.

In last Sunday's paper there was a quote from the Argentinian Nobel Peace Prize-winner Adolfo Perez Esquievel: "No one can sow seeds with fists. To sow seeds one must open one's hands."

In my long life as a priest I have met many arguments for celibacy, but once in awhile I encounter a marriage made in heaven. I pray to God it is yours. If anyone feels he qualifies, come up and see me and I'll put a gold star on your marriage license, presuming, that is, that you have one.

Amen.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

According to former Social Security Commissioner Dorcas Hardy, the system's trust fund is growing by billions of dollars per year and is expected to peak at $12-trillion. But, she says, in the third decade of the 21st Century the Government will have to start dippin into that reserve to pay benefits because of an increased elderly population and fewer people paying social security taxes. Among her recommendations: Raise the retirement age to 73.

Festival Auction, held at the Monterey Conference Center.

Combined, the live and silent auctions raised $42,000, with proceeds going to the Andre Tchelistcheff Scholarship Fund to further enological and viticultural studies.

Balestreri's high bid was in commemoration of the late William Durney, "a legendary winemaker and a great friend. Bill Durney's life was a shining example of the tremendous achievements made in the American wine industry," Balestreri said.

Balestreri, who served as president of the National Restaurant Association in 1985, is co-owner of Monterey's renowned Sardine Factory restaurant as well as other restaurants and properties in Northern California.

Michael Davis from Christie's auction house, presided over the event. More than 175 big-bottled California wines were auctioned. The festival is sponsored by the National Restaurant Association.

THE MONTEREY COUNTY CULTURAL COUNCIL ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

The Monterey County Cultural Council's annual meeting of the board of directors was held on March 19 at the La Mirada Adobe in Monterey.

A slate of new officers was elected with John Totten becoming president; Anne McGowan, vice-president; Elizabeth Pasquinelli, treasurer; and Robin Venuti, secretary.

President John Totten submitted a resolution commending outgoing president Roderick L. Dewar for his many years of service to the organization. Following the unanimous adoption of the Monterey County Cultural Council Board Resolution, Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman presented a resolution from the Monterey County Board of Supervisors commending Dewar for his many efforts on the behalf of the arts in Monterey County. Kathy O'Boyle, administrative assistant to Sen. Henry Mello, then presented Dewar with a resolution from the Senate Rules Committee of the California State Legislature commending Dewar for his long service to the arts.

Totten then submitted a letter to the board, which was unanimously approved, commending Veronica Flores, Monterey Cultural Council secretary, for her outstanding administrative efforts.

THE BARNYARD

THE ANCIENT Forest Quilt will be displayed through mid-April at GWS Galleries on Carmel Rancho Lane. The quilt will later be awarded in a drawing to benefit environmental causes.

Ancient Forest Quilt bears an environmental message

The "Ancient Forest Quilt" will be on exhibit at the GWS Galleris, 26390 Carmel Rancho Lane, Carmel (next to the Barnyard) April 1 through 14.

This is the first appearance of the quilt in Monterey County. It was created for a drawing to benefit the Sierra Club and the Environmental Protection Information Center by the Mono Lake Quilters of Berkeley.

The quilt will be exhibited around the state until the drawing takes place on June 23 in a redwood grove.

The 75-by-95-inch quilt was a year in the making and is the result of 10 women's artistry.

The artists started their research and design work in December 1988. They consulted recent publications to learn the new understanding that scientists are framing — that the life forms in the forests which have never been logged are inter-related in many complicated ways. People are beginning to see the life of an ancient forest as that of a great organism. These relationships form the theme of the quilt.

The quilt has three major panels and 10 smaller ones. The top panel shows a spotted owl and marbled murrelets returning to their forest nest through a hand-dyed dawn sky.

The center panel, which includes a hand-painted rhododendron, shows a redwood forest in the fog. The bottom panel displays roots, fungi and a stream. The smaller side panels depict close-ups of native plants and animals.

Proceeds from the drawing will go to help the Sierra Club and the Information Center pay for lawsuits to protect the ancient forests of California.

Tickets for the drawing are $2 and will be available at the GWS Galleries. They may also be obtained at the Sierra Club Book Store in the Las Tiendas Building on Ocean Avenue between Dolores and San Carlos, in Carmel, which is open 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Artist schedules open house

Carmel poet and painter Carolyn Tyson will be hosting a showing of sculptures, photographs and watercolors from 4 to 7 p.m. Friday, March 30.

Along with Tyson's paintings, the works of Tom Conklin and Fernand Fonssagrives will be featured. The showing and lawn party will be held at Tyson's historic Carmel Point home, 26262 Isabella in Carmel.

Tyson's work has been exhibited in London and in Paris, as well as in New York, Long Island, Beverly Hills, and locally at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

She is a member of the Kearsage Group in Napague and the Institute of Modern Art in New York. She has studied with Victor D'Amico and at the Cunningham Institute.

Parisian Fernand Fonssagrives is a past winner of the best-in-show award from the Guild Hall Artist Members' Exhibition. After working for Town and Country for 13 years, he turned to sculpture.

For reservations, call 624-0867.

ART NOTES

By Sam Colburn

Those who chisel rocks

IT IS QUITE possible that the Monterey Peninsula is better known for its photographers than its artists. We do have Donald Teague, painter of watercolors, whose works command a high price, but wielders of the brush or those who chisel rocks have not received the renown of Edward Weston or Ansel Adams. Perhaps one small reason for this is the fact that photographs are reproduced easily, and paintings or sculpture are not.

In any event the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art is presenting "Morley Baer: Forty Years of Photographs." Using an 8-by-10 view camera, he has achieved his own insight about the way things look. Most of his seeing has been directed at the landscape of California although some photographs in this show were taken in New Mexico.

At the entrance to this exhibit is "Farm Knoll, Contra Costa." This is a composition of great clouds and furrowed earth. It conveys a strong feeling of the unity of dirt and sky. In the gallery about the first shot that you see is entitled, "Creekbed, Capay Valley." There are two main thrusts and three darks that hold your attention. The reflections in the water make a complicated pattern.

Morley was fascinated with Point Lobos as was Edward Weston. His "Sea Slug Rock, Point Lobos" has a form which is quite abstract. "Spring Storm" concerns a single cloud over rolling hills against a dark sky. This puff of white has a magical quality perhaps because of its luminosity. "Tidal Rock, Garrapata" is very strong with a variety of forms. Morley picks up that beautiful patterning of the agricultural landscape in his "Rice Fields, Sacramento Valley."

His interest in the Southwest led to "Enchanted Mesa," Acoma, New Mexico and "Morada," Abiquiu, in the same state. He captures the austerity of the area. One gets an idea of why our coast is called the greatest meaning of land and sea from his "Garrapata Beach," and "South Shoreline, Malpaso."

One of his latest works is "Cypress, Point Lobos." This is an old tree and it shows in this photograph — storm by storm. Morley also includes in his seeing the geometric shapes of barns which used to be such an enrichment to the California landscape, but are, unhappily enough, decreasing in numbers due to development.

DOWN AT THE Carmel Mission Inn on Rio Road in the Carmel area the very original work of Eve Tartar is presented in the lobby. The media is hard to define. You might call it collage. She uses tiny pieces of colored paper, paint and cloth which are combined to produce a strange, swirling effect.

"Our Fabled Coast" is the largest of these. For color I liked "California Summer." This is an invocation of the climate in our state, and also of the radiance and energy. She shows a wall sculpture called "Caliphers of Time." To me these are rocket ships bound for some rendezvous in space. Her use of space can be complex or simple. "Secret Chamber" is complicated — an insinuation of secrets within secrets is an example of the first while "Gathering of the Gurus" characterizes the second. Eve Tartar has a very sophisticated eye, and she develops media to interpret it.

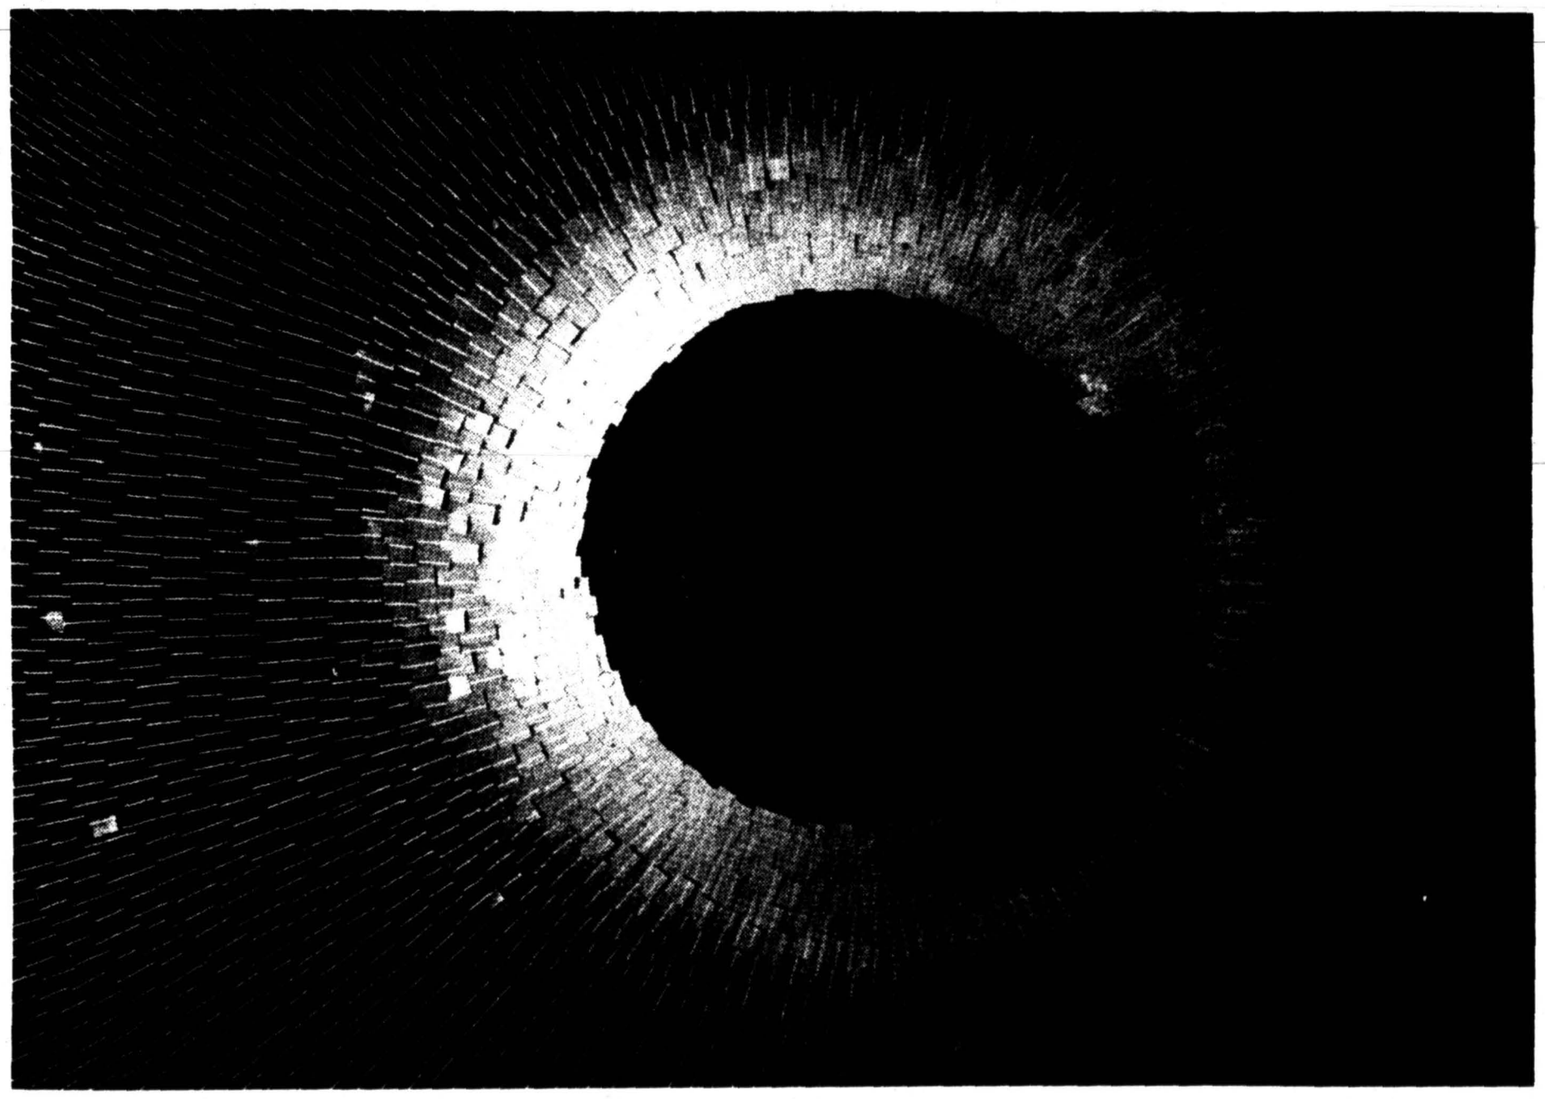
ARTISTS EQUITY was founded to protect artists. Unlike unions however, you do not have to have met certain standards. You join this organization by paying a membership fee. "Open Studio" is th title of the interesting show installed by the Central Coast Chapter of Artists Equity and Art at the Airport on the second floor of the airport building. The panels and the glassed-in compartments are very handsome and are on loan from the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

The assembled works show the immense diversity of Equity members. Huntington Witherill is a photographer and he exhibits a silver print, "Graffiti No. 2 Nevada" in which the figures have a strange, ghostly quality. Among the ceramics shown is "Fireseed" by Peter Pilot. It is very imaginative.

Also in the same medium is "Black and White" by Gary Smith, and "Submarine" by Harriet Ferguson. Her husband, Barclay Ferguson, has painted a large acrylic of his beloved Moss Landing power plant. He handles an extremely complicated structure with unbelievable precision. The color is muted. The drawing carries the work.

Carolyn Berry makes books in which each page is a little painting, a drawing, or a reproduction. She has one in this show, but unfortunately you can see only one page. In mixed media Mike Duffy presents "To Be." In sculpture Susan Andreason shows a trio of horse's heads; Richard Meyer, "K6," which is black chrome plated steel; and Terry Adkeson, one of his surreal ladies in muslin and hydroseal.

Artists Equity is fulfilling a great purpose here on the peninsula by bringing artists together in an association that does not depend on what they may think of each other's work. Their Open Studio Tour this year will occur on May 19 and 20. This event gives the public a chance to see the different environments in which the artists create.



CARMEL VALLEY artist Eve Tartar exhibited a collection of her mixed-media collages at the Carmel Mission Inn. The artist employs minute pieces of paper, gold leaf and other materials in her designs.

Eastern portion of Molera Park open

The eastern portion of Andrew Molera State Park is now open to full public use from sunrise to sunset, daily. East Molera had been closed since last July because of the Molera II fire. The closure was initiated for safety purposes and also to allow the area to revegetate, undisturbed. The fire did not affect any of the park's facilities or camping areas.

The fire has presented an opportunity for new life that usually does not exist until after a burn.

Andrew Molera State Park is located 22 miles south of Carmel on Highway 1. It has 15 miles of hiking trails, an unpaved parking lot with a small picnic area, and a primitive walk-in trail camp. For additional information, call 667-2315.

MUSIC CORNER

By Nathalie Plotkin

County Symphony pleases Sunday audience

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Symphony under the direction of Clark Suttle was heard in concert Sunday afternoon in King Hall of the Naval Postgraduate School and managed to offer orchestral brilliance full of vivid coloring and at the other end of the spectrum, Eighteenth Century Rococco pastel charm, to their pleased audience.

The Prelude to the third act of "Lohengrin" by Wagner was a glittering program opener. Though it is a relatively brief piece, its joyful mood and shining brass sound rang clearly through the hall. This is highly effective music and the full orchestra gave a fine reading.

Then, Hermann Baumann, a renowned solo hornist, joined what looked like a handful of strings and winds (quite a contrast to the size of the preceding Wagnerian group) to give a polished and authoritative performance of the Haydn "Horn Concerto No. 2 in D Major" which he played on a horn with valves. This is the modern chromatic instrument normally employed in symphonic music. It is notorious as one of the most difficult instruments to become proficient on, since the pitches are made by differing lip tensions and an accurate embouchure is a basic hard-to-develop requirement as well.

Baumann is a past master of his instrument and his playing of the delightful diatonic themes of the concerto was replete with wit, charm and delicacy. Though the horn has great strength of tone, Baumann kept it under a tight rein and matched the proportion of the Rococco ambiance created by his chamber-sized string accompaniment. They, for their part encompassed the trills and frills of their music with ease and polish.

Next we heard the Mozart "Rondo for Horn and Orchestra" K. 514 on the natural (without valves) horn. This is the familiar "hunting horn" whose notes, based on the overtone series, are made with the lips and with one hand moving in the bell of the horn. He used an authentic instrument made 200 years ago by Courtois in Paris. This horn's tone cannot be pushed and it didn't have the clarity and positive effect of the valve horn heard earlier. However, the soloist's technique and sensitive manipulation of the instrument was truly impressive. As an encore, Baumann played Rossini's "Le Grande Fanfare" with his own sparkling variations on its hunting call theme.

Still, the high point of the afternoon was a memorable performance of a rarely offered monument of the symphonic literature, Mahler's "Symphony No. 9 in D Major." It took courage by Suttle to program and to attack this work which lasts 72 minutes and is the last true example of the Romantic symphony. The conductor who does this must be absolutely certain of the musical ability of his orchestra and of the musical maturity of his audience. Suttle was correct on both counts.

As in past programs we were offered music calling for consummate virtuosity on the part of the players. This time it still held true for a fully augmented orchestra with the winds, brass and percussion contingents almost doubled in size. The playing was superb, all the more to be remarked on when one remembers how limited rehearsal time is these days due to budget constraints. The playing was consistent in its technical finesse and responsiveness to Suttle's direction. He maintained the flow of the music, keeping the rhythms and their changes clearly defined. The interpretation was coherent throughout, bringing out the strong colors and great emotional contrasts in the music.

There were magical moments to be noted as the work went on; a flute and french horn duet near the close of the broodingly emotive first movement was one. The effect of braying strings and thumping percussion in the Landler movement was another. In the Rondo-Burleske, the horns were in absolute top form and the trumpet solos were outstanding. In the last movement, most unusually, the second violins were musically spotlighted and shone therein. In general, this is brilliantly scored music, created by a master orchestral colorist and the Monterey County Symphony rose to the challenge and once again displayed its high professionalism.

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

Circles of inspiration

NAMES: Peninsula-raised Ray Drummond remains one of the busiest bassists in jazz. Over the next three months, manager Tup Lohse notes, Ray will appear on no fewer than nine albums as leader or featured player. That impressive fact makes room for two duo sessions — with pianists John Hicks and Bill Mays. Ray and Bill will play Bradley's of Manhattan to mark their package's release (DMP label).

Donald Bailey works out on drums and jazz harmonica. Jimmy Lyons says Donald will blow mouth harp during September's Friday night all-star opener of Monterey Jazz Festival. Then the Bailey band'll perform at the fairgrounds Night Club.

Queen Ida and her Bon Temps Zydeco Band will be spotlighted at Monterey Bay Aquarium next month (Saturday 4/21) in a benefit for York School Scholarship Program. Call Robin Venuti's office — she serves as York School community relations honcha — if you wish ticket info.

Charming Mary von Saltza now manages the Sheraton's Monterey Bay Club. Teri Waros, whose promotion was noted herein last time, still books the venue.

Pianist Benjamin Falana plays Express d'Orient of The Crossroads on Wednesday through Saturday evenings (5:30-8:30). It's dinner jazz in a light, pretty vein — Rodgers and Hart, Cole Porter, like that. Benjamin says he's pulling together a straight-ahead band to "make a video" on May 30 at Monterey Bay Club. "I've got the charts — and executive assurances that the piece will be processed for viewing over PBS-TV."

No surprise that Express d'Orient co-proprietor George Kloczl supports the music. He was a pro jazz reedman who "quit the touring grind" in 1964.

Hold everything. Legendary jazz pianist Walter Norris has signed on for a solo one-nighter at Yoshi's in Oakland next month (Tuesday 4/10). Walter worked with Thad Jones for many years and now calls West Germany his home. Among the true masters. Door charge of $10 per; two sets.

Vocalist Scotty Wright had peninsula pianist Biff Smith on his most recent Monterey Bay Club gig. They broke out Biff's fetching ballad entitled First Rain. Drummer Jimmy LePine treats every job like big fun and thus was a visual treat too. Bassist Dave Suggs complemented Scotty's octave-crossing scat flights beautifully.

Kimball's of San Francisco announces the Art Farmer unit with tenorman Clifford Jordan (4/11-14). Stephane Grappelli's a done deal at Kimball's East in Emeryville (4/4-5).

The R&B world has lost Larry (Big Twist) Nolan. Heart failure. Chicago. Age 53. The singer described himself via one lyric as "300 pounds of heavenly joy."

HBO producers picked actress Lynn Whitfield to play the amazing Josephine Baker in a forthcoming biographical flick.

Randy Newman songs will be spotted throughout the new TV cop series being developed by Steven Bochco of Hill Street Blues fame. That's the plan, at any rate. The industry wire says Bochco's already battling censors over lingo and plot points.

The New Republic cover story by critic Stanley Crouch calls Miles Davis "the most brilliant sellout in jazz history" and "the most remarkable licker of moneyed boots." So music business politics waves about its grisly snout. Crouch rather claims Wynton Marsalis as Stanley's property and locus of wild praise.

Bassist Red Mitchell: "I do think the politicians could take a lesson from us, if they'd listen. I think a functioning jazz group is a perfect example of how people can come together with love and be both groupish and selfish at the same time."

Starting the first Friday afternoon in April (4/6), my show over KRML Jazz Radio will add Afrotracks. Contemporary African musics from the library of collector and co-host Carl Haycock. Weekly hour thereafter (3-4 Fridays). The special feature will carry only community spots — call the station if your group wishes inclusion.

RE: MOSE. The Blue Note people sent an advance cassette. Mose Allison's new album — cut in New Orleans with Ben Sidran producing — shows that this spiritual and literal son of the Mississippi Delta still puts tough love into original tunes that swing and swing and challenge mortal smugness.

The package's dozen tracks include eight Mose compositions. These cite ozone layer, the Orwellian Big Brother watching us all, theft of The Blues by white musicians, pompous joggers, his own complex nature (truly concerned or merely self-satisfied?) — and Allison's backyard as a place of peaceful renewal. As always, he's funny and touching and grounded in the limitless regional art. During a phone interview from his Long Island home, the man said shops should have the new item by April or May.

Mose named the late Kenneth Patchen as his "favorite poet." And right then, some special click occurred — Patchen was my mentor and gave me the last interview (Capra Press). "He gets so much surprise into lines," Mose said. "He knocks me out. So I've done some songs that might fit what he did. Civilization is a daydream. All of our fantasies and aspirations are daydreams till they become actual. The idea of democracy might be a daydream — we never have seen it anywhere. I'm not saying daydreams are bad. We need them."

And: "One of my daydreams is that my songs have some positive effect. People come up and say my songs have helped them get through bad periods. That makes you feel like you're not completely worthless." (Miriam Patchen told me that "Mose Allison vocals were a great comfort" over the years immediately following her husband's death in January '72. How fine when such circles of inspiration gain completion.)

Mose was a lit major at Louisiana State University (philosophy minor). "I might start writing fiction or short memoirs," he said. "Who knows? Maybe a novel or fictionalized biography. I won't do it till I feel compelled. The Blues will always remain important to me. Lightning Hopkins, Muddy Waters, John Lee Hooker — they're among my permanent Heroes. My father had the general store in Tippo, Mississippi. I played piano and sang from grade school on. The Delta of the '30s was Blues Country. It was in the air; I grew up with it."

The point's pertinent locally since Mose Allison works both the Monterey Bay Club and Kuumbwa Jazz Center early next week. He'll be at the Santa Cruz spot on Monday night (4/2) — shows at 7:30 and 9:30; tickets $12 per. The Sheraton's room will activate a $5 cover for his gig of Tuesday evening

PATCHEN REMEMBERED

(4/3). "I try to be a realist," Mose said. "I'm not trying to impose pessimism or optimism on the future. I try to see things as they are."

On Thursday night (3/29), The Cortet of multiple reedman John Cortes will share some new tunes at Monterey Bay Club. Pianist David Kempton (aka Dasher) will appear with the excellent group because John Donaldson's visiting his native England for a short spell.

Other MBC offerings: Roger Eddy Band (3/30-31), Bob Phillips and Terry Miller (4/1), Don Pendergrass plus pals (4/2), knockout San Francisco vocalist Kitty Margolis (4/4).

Kuumbwa on Friday night (3/30) — Mood Swings with Med Daughtery, Rich Turnoy, Ian Fugate. Tickets at the door only; $5 apiece (dollar off to Jazz Society card holders).

Monterey Peninsula Jazz Orchestra will play two complete sets at Mission Ranch Barn on Monday evening (4/2). Also the "break set" showcasing band members in combo context. Food and bar service.

KQED-TV announces the significant program Born in Africa for Tuesday night (4/3) at ten o'clock. Subject: Philly Bongoley Lutaaya. The celebrated singer and musician from Uganda gave his nation new hope in battling AIDS. The man died this past December, himself an AIDS victim.

Says the public station: "Philly was the first prominent African to declare publicly he had AIDS. He had contracted it from a woman. In Africa, more than 90 percent of the AIDS cases are contracted through heterosexual sex, blood transfusions, or transmitted from mother to child in the womb. Until Philly's declaration, AIDS was a shameful secret...Uganda became one of the first African nations to begin an open campaign against AIDS. Philly Lutaaya was its leader. His message was simple. For anyone who tests positive, keep the virus to yourself. Don't kill other people."

Folk dance troupe celebrates Hungarian heritage

THE KARPATOK Hungarian Folk Ensemble will appear in concert at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 31 at Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel.

Karpatok's 45 dancers, singers and musicians perform a wide variety of folklore traditions from the Magyar homeland of Eastern Europe. In authentic, elaborately embroidered village costumes, the performers bring to life dances, rituals and celebrations with universal appeal and special meaning for anyone of Hungarian descent.

Based in Los Angeles, Karpatok returned to Hungary most recently in 1985, where its concert tour and gala appearances at the World Folklore Festival in Budapest won acclaim.

The ensemble's repertoire includes choreographies of the Hungarian State Folk Ensemble and original works by Artistic Director Tibor Toghia and other choreographers. Dances range from young women's harvest dances accompanied by song to the vigorous stick dances of Great Plains herdsmen and elaborately competitive dances of Transylvanian lads.

Karpatok's dancers, who sing in Hungarian, are accompanied by a village orchestra that plays in the style of a gypsy string quartet as well as on a number of rare and unusual Hungarian folk instruments.

Tickets for the performance are $12.50 and $10 and are available at Sunset Center or Center Stage Ticketing. For reservations or for more information, call 624-3996 or 649-5561.

New Visions

The Western Stage continues the New Visions Festival through April 8 in the Studio and Main Stage theaters of the Performing Arts Center at Hartnell College, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas. All performances are offered free of charge.

New Visions is a multi-faceted performing arts festival which focuses on the theater artist: actors in solo performance, older works seen through the eyes of young directors, fresh new plays by new playwrights in various stages of development, and an opportunity for the patron to experience theater from the inside out.

Upcoming offerings of the New Visions Festival are as follows:

Selfish siblings

THE SELFISH SISTERS Araminte (Staci Hartmann) and Bodhislaine (Laurie Petkus) abuse their little nephew, Petit Pierre (Nina Langlie) in the Staff Players Repertory Company staging of Beauty and the Beast. The production continues at the Indoor Forest Theater in Carmel.

SOLO ARTIST PROJECTS

One, or at most, two actors appear in these productions, which all begin at 8 p.m.

Friday, March 30:

An Evening with Stephen Vincent Benet, a readers' theater presentation of selections from Benet's work, is edited by Betty Dayton.

Book of the Dark, by Bill Keim, features Mona-Louise Hyre as Virginia Woolf's "half-witted" half-sister who discourses on language, madness and tea.

Hooray for Hollywood by J.R. Hall, lovingly and jokingly brings to life the early days of Hollywood.

Sunday, April 1

Elvis P. — Where Can You Be, is written and performed by Jerry McAllister, who offers an evening with Jerry Sivle, Elvis-o-phile extraordinaire.

The Hank Williams Story, written and performed by John Hicks, presents in story and song the man who "left a lasting imprint on American country music."

Bully, by Jerome Alden, features Jim McLean as Teddy Roosevelt.

The Skin of Our Teeth

Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize-winning play will be staged by director Jon Selover in a low-tech environment, keeping the focus on the actors, the director and the play.

Curtain is at 8 p.m. Thursday, Saturday and Friday, March 29, 31 and April 6, on the Main Stage in the Hartnell College Performing Arts Center.

For additional information about these free shows, contact the Western Stage at 375-2111 or 758-1221.

Information on alternative routes is available from the Big Sur State Parks District Office, 667-2316, and from the Monterey Ranger District Office of the U.S. Forest Service, 385-5434.

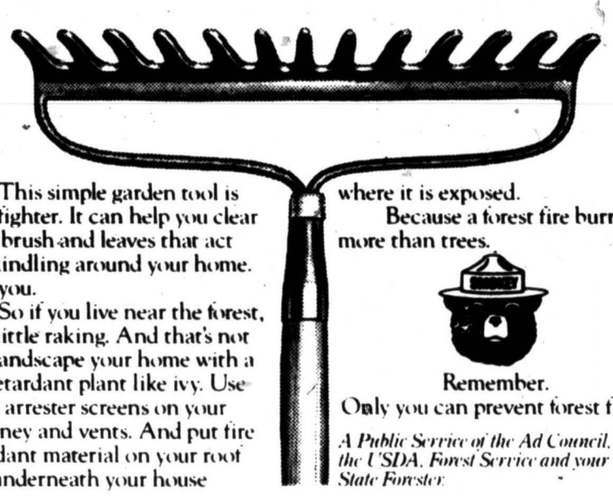
HOW THIS RAKE CAN SAVE YOUR LIFE.



This simple garden tool is a firefighter. It can help you clear away brush and leaves that act like kindling around your home. And you.

So if you live near the forest, do a little raking. And that's not all. Landscape your home with a fire retardant plant like ivy. Use spark arrester screens on your chimney and vents. And put fire retardant material on your roof and underneath your house where it is exposed.

Because a forest fire burns more than trees.

Remember.
Only you can prevent forest fires.

A faint aroma of flowers and potpourri provides a friendly greeting as you enter. Oversized sweaters are draped casually over antique chairs and tables, antique jewelry and accessories grace and complement the blouses, hats, vests and lacy skirts she has carefully displayed.

The cozy atmosphere reflects the skill of her 30 years in the interior design business. Retired for two years (she was the former owner of French Collections and Rita Seger Interior Design), she decided earlier this year to put her creative ideas to work.

"I decided to put together a boutique with my own special philosophy, which is, clothes are not an age, but they're a look," she says. "My personal style is eclectic. I like clothes that are classic, but have a twist to them."

For example, she doesn't carry short skirts because, "what goes 'in' goes 'out' " of style. She prefers longer classic skirts, with the twist that it's a split skirt rather than a traditional one.

Her personal style and the clothing designs she creates are born out of her long-standing love for interior design and collecting antiques.

"My philosophy is that 'style' is applicable to fashion also, so I switched from interior design to fashion design," she says. "It's very creative to me ... creative with an eclectic look."

In addition to the clothing designs, she car-

Famous Pendleton quality brought to sunny spring fashions

This spring Carmel Pendleton combines the famous Pendleton quality with lightweight fabrics of cotton, and cotton blends for men and women.

Inspired by the beauty of America is the theme that Pendleton's designers used in choosing the color of patterns for this exciting line.

Of course Pendleton is still America's premier wool specialist and there is always an excellent selection of woolen products including blazers, skirts, pants, jackets and accessories for women — all in misses sizes and petites.

And for men there is the famous Pendleton shirt, plus sweaters, slacks, sports coats and casual jackets.

One of the most interesting and popular parts of the Pendleton line is the collection of authentic Indian blankets. Bright, vibrant colors with original designs have made these collectors' items.

Also there is a special selection of the Indian blankets made into jackets and vests — these items are made especially for the three Northern California Pendleton stores.

In a time when so much of the wearing apparel is imported, it's refreshing to find quality such as Pendleton that is all made in America. Stop by and see what real American quality is all about.

Carmel Pendleton is located at Sixth Avenue and San Carlos Street in downtown Carmel. Phone 625-9505.

Macy's will record your choices, and enter the information into its computer. Within days, the information will be available at every Macy's store in Northern California and Nevada. To prevent duplications and exchanges, the computer constantly updates your list.

Macy's can, upon request, place your registration in Macy's back east, and Bullocks of Southern California. Out-of-town guests can even shop by phone. Have them call 1-800-MACYS-4-U, and ask for the Bridal Gift Consultant.

The gifts can be charged on their Macy's, Visa, Mastercard or American Express account, and sent to you.

Traditionally, china, crystal, flatware and kitchen items are among the most popular wedding gifts. But Macy's Bridal and Gift Registry lets you choose so much more. Consider these possibilities:

- Linens and Bedding
- Home Electronics and Furniture
- Luggage and Travel Items
- Lingerie

Your list should include items in every price range. Some inexpensive gifts you're sure to appreciate; oven mitts, kitchen gadgets or a travel alarm clock.

Our registry service is complimentary. And Macy's will gladly list all your gift choices, even for merchandise not readily available at Macy's.

Register at least two months in advance, longer if possible. Guests will begin shopping as soon as your wedding plans are official. Some of the patterns you see at Macy's are not fully stocked in our store, and we may need to order your gift. If your china, crystal or flatware pattern is not immediately available, Macy's will mail you a gift card stating that a place setting or item has been ordered for you. We'll send your gift when the merchandise arrives.

Ask close friends and family to spread the word that you are registered at Macy's. You may want to include this in your shower and engagement party invitations, though it's not appropriate to mention in your wedding invitation.

YEARS OF experience and unmatched selection make Macy's the place to register for your bridal gifts. Computer registration allows out-of-town guests to shop at Macy's in their communities while avoiding duplication of presents. (Gregg Wutke photo).*

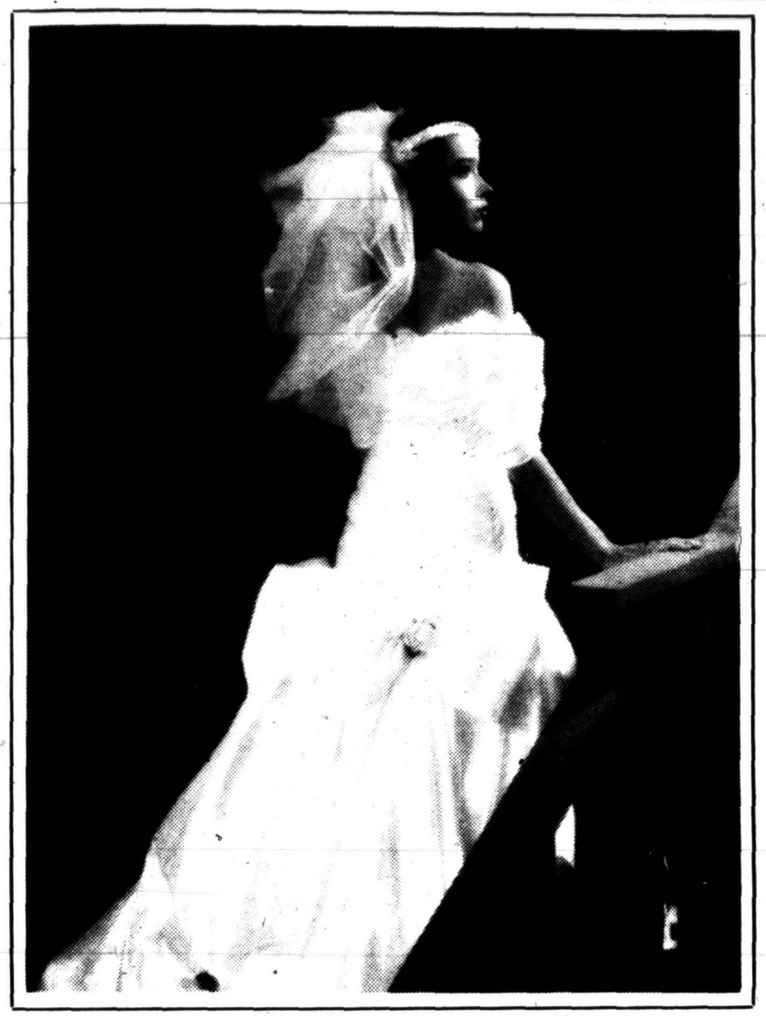
Dress entire bridal party with help from Custom Weddings

At Custom Weddings you can dress your entire wedding party without ever leaving the store.



THE LAST word in elegance and quality, gowns from Custom Weddings can be specially ordered and sewn in-house, or choose from such top lines as Galina and Eve of My Lady. (Gregg Wutke photo).

For the bride, Custom Weddings offers gowns from major creators such as Demetrious for Ilissa, Galina and Eve of My Lady.

That's not to mention custom-designed dresses from the store's in-house seamstress.

In addition, the service-oriented store stocks a full line of rental tuxedos and dresses for the mother of the bride, bridesmaids and flower girls.

Wedding accessories include shoes and custom-designed garters and ring pillows.

Custom Weddings carries ready-to-wear dresses for proms, after-five and parties year-round.

In fact, Custom Weddings will keep track of who's wearing which prom dress, so you don't end up at your prom with the same dress as a classmate.

Custom Weddings is open from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday and is located at 486 Alvarado St. in Old Monterey. Phone 372-7116.

EACH BAKED from scratch, the cakes prepared by Del Monte Pastries can serve from 20 to 500 guests. Consult with the Del Monte Pastries staff for a cake baked in your favorite flavor and decorated with the colors of your wedding party. (Gregg Wutke photo).

Reception-starring cakes created by Del Monte Pastries

If you're planning a wedding, birthday party or any special occasion, keep in mind that cakes are a specialty at Del Monte Pastries.

The cakes, which are always made from scratch, come in six flavors and can serve from 20 to 500 guests. Of course, the cakes can be decorated in the colors of your bridal party and to your specifications and are the favorite of selective caterers.

The integrity of the Old Country can be found at 14-year-old Del Monte Pastries with pastry chef Fritz Naef and master bread baker George Haag, both from Switzerland. Fritz's wife, Barbara, is also a partner in the business.

The next time you're shopping at Del Monte Center, take a break, sit down and enjoy a pastry and coffee at Del Monte Pastries — it's located next to Lucky's in the convenience center.

The store is open from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. Phone 375-4222.

Time-tested, German recipes followed at Desserts by Rita

Go ahead, you deserve the best in freshly baked pastries. Stop into Desserts by Rita in Santa Cruz.

It's not every day that dessert-lovers can find treasures such as those baked by German-born Rita Tveitnes, who oversees the tempting morsels created at the intimate bakery.

Would you believe Double Delight cheesecake, with chocolate and vanilla cheesecake meeting in one, light dessert?

Other innovative cheesecakes include lemon, raspberry, blueberry, orange blossom, peanut butter, chocolate chip and pumpkin.

That's not to mention Rita's tortes, such as her Bavarian peach-chestnut delight or strawberry cream torte.

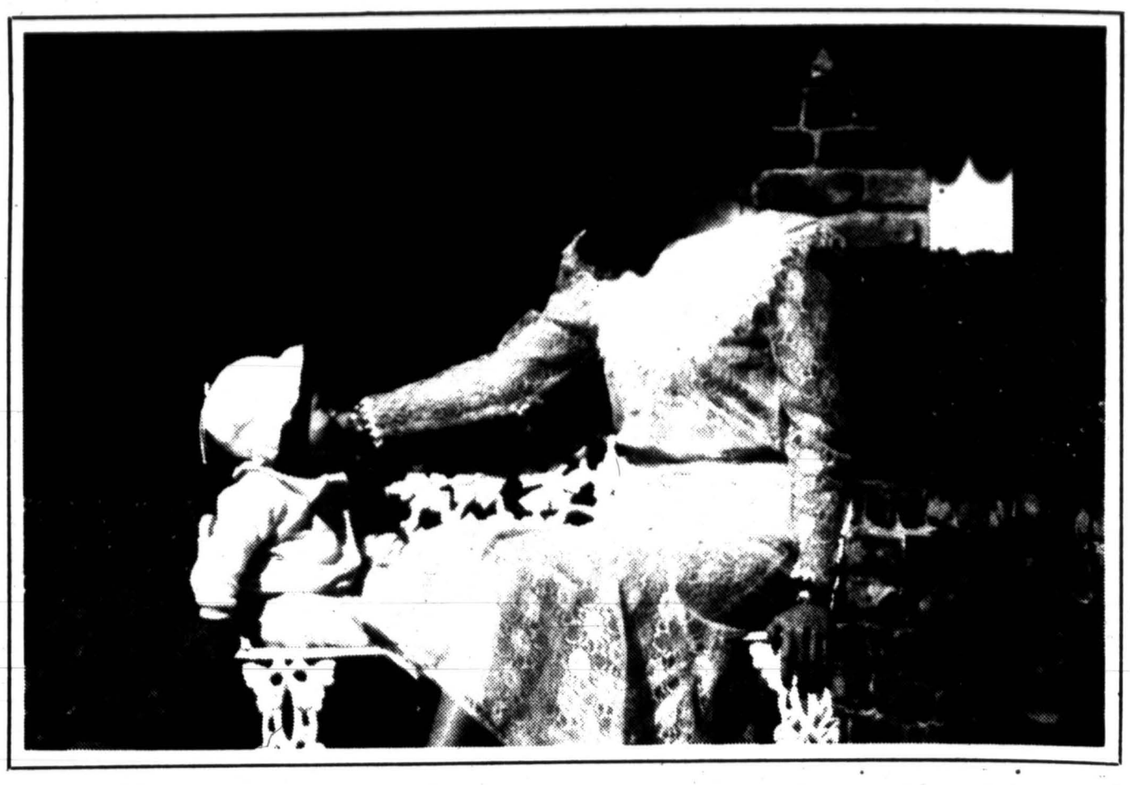
One reason her creations taste so special is because Rita imports much of her ingredients from the Old Country, which complements her special touches like using only fresh butter in her desserts.

The idea that she uses time-tested, German recipes has reached into the community, with many European customers stopping into Rita's each day for a treat to go with their gourmet coffee.

This summer, Desserts by Rita will move to a larger space at the Seascape Resort in Aptos.

Desserts by Rita is open from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. daily and is located at 302 Potrero St. in Santa Cruz. Phone 425-1525.

INNOVATIVE CHEESECAKES, heavenly Bavarian tortes and other pastry creations are lovingly baked by German-born Rita Tveitnes, owner of Desserts by Rita in Santa Cruz.



DRESS UP for that special day with the help of Monterey Resale Shop, your source for gently worn designer creations. This lacy Scott McClintock design is a bargain when the source is Monterey Resale Shop. (Gregg Wutke photo).

The small consignment boutique features such labels as Bob Mackie, Anne Klein, Calvin Klein, Ellen Tracy, Ralph Lauren, Joannie Char, Pendleton and Liz Claiborne.

The Flower Ladies spice ceremonies with beautiful blooms

The Flower Ladies offer a completely personalized wedding service. They'll take whatever image that you have in mind and make it real with flowers.

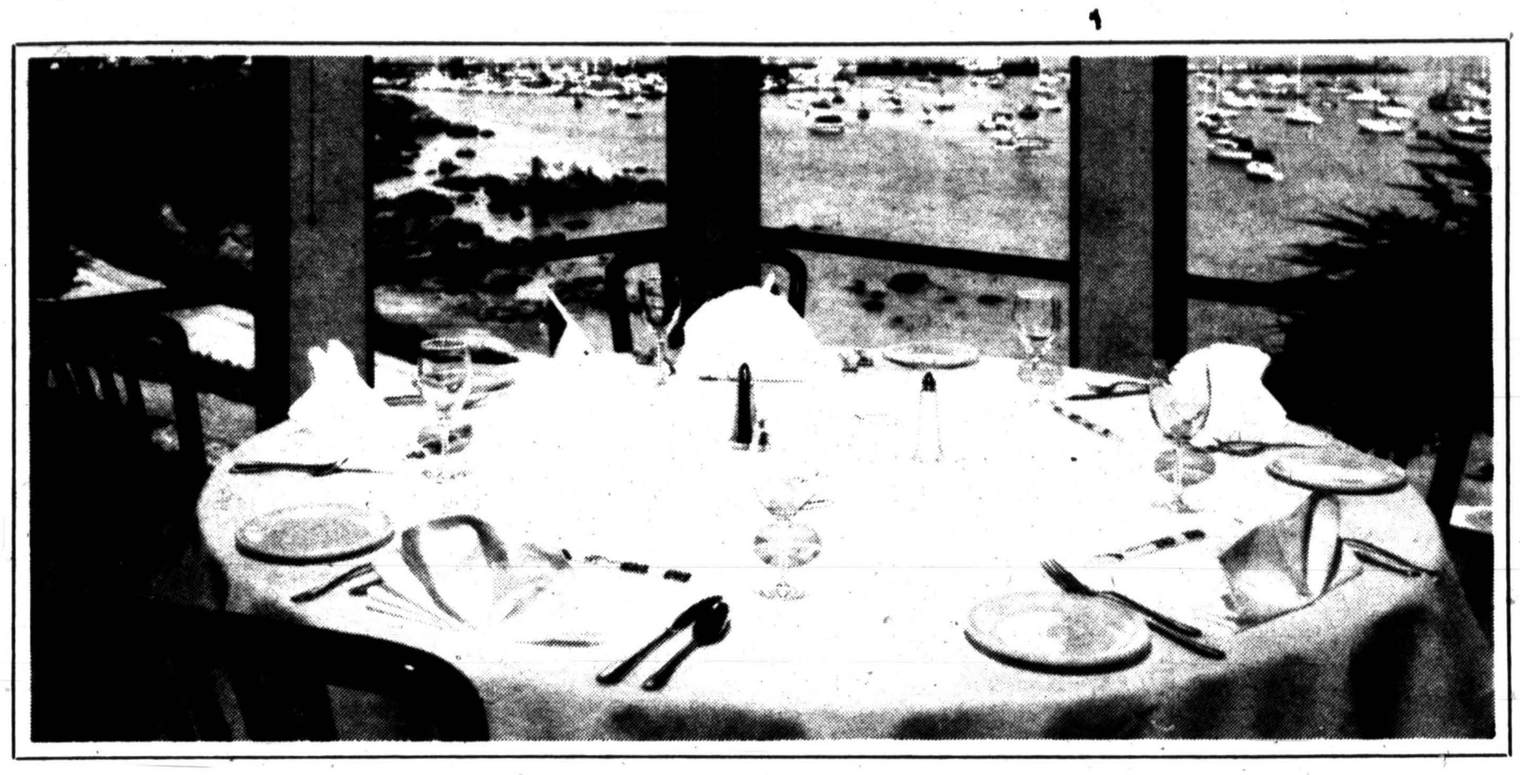
So whether you see yourself in white lace and beads amid the abundant blossoms of an English country garden, or gazing into the siena and gold of a tropical sunset with orchids in your hair, the Flower Ladies will knock themselves out to achieve the look you want.

The Ladies are able to offer an astonishing array of flower varieties. Their three acres of cutting gardens provide more than 100 types of rare and old-fashioned flowers. They also scour the Watsonville and San Francisco flower markets for anything their gardens don't produce.

Their service begins with a lengthy consultation, and doesn't end until the wedding day when the last boutonniere is pinned on. They are often the first to arrive at the wedding, making sure that there is plenty of time to complete the decoration of a trellis, a church altar or a wedding cake before the first guest arrives.

They'll pin in hair flowers, make sure that the flower girl doesn't squash her basket, and show the bride how to hold her bouquet.

You can trust the Flower Ladies to bring their 12 years of expertise and personalized service to every aspect of flower planning for an unforgettably lovely wedding.



FOR AN INTIMATE party or a full-blown wedding reception, Islands Restaurant in Monterey's Heritage Harbor supplies a striking panorama to make the occasion memorable. Islands Restaurant will highlight your party with entrees and hors d'oeuvres that capture the tempting flavors of the Pacific Rim and Caribbean. (Gregg Wutke photo).

EXUBERANT colors and rare varieties characterize the floral creations devised by the Flower Ladies. They have the skills and flower sources to make weddings beautiful.

Capture wedding ambiance via trained lenses of TGO Photography

Carmel Valley photographer Tom O'Neal will truly capture your wedding's ambiance and excitement.

Through his TGO Photography, O'Neal pledges to make your wedding photos "fun."

"I love weddings," he says, referring to the joyousness of the events.

Mind you, O'Neill approaches photography in a less-than-traditional manner. You'll not find any "grip-and-grin" shots with him.

Instead, O'Neill looks for candid and animated shots of the wedding party and their friends.

O'Neill has been practicing his craft since the late '60s in Los Angeles, where he designed more than 100 record album covers.

His interest in shooting weddings surfaced after he was married and he viewed the ceremony as "one of love."

To begin with, the store carries major designers, who stay abreast and create the latest in stylings.

A sampling includes Bridal Originals, Alfred Angelo, Demetrious Collection, Jessica McClintock, Lissette, Lyce Designs and Bill Levkoff.
